To Be Considered in Your Plans for the Future

When making plans for the future, safeguarding your loved ones at a time when you can no longer do so personally, there are these qualifications to be considered in naming your Executor and Trustee---capacity, experience, responsibility, record of achievement. The Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company offers a unique service, in these respects, to estates large or small---a matter which one of our officers will gladly discuss with you.

On The Hill

Contemporary Topics of Interest to Graduates of Brown

Dean Randall Retires

WITH the close of the present academic year, Dean Otis Everett Randall's active connection with Brown University comes to an end. He will leave Providence shortly after Commencement, and, if his present intentions are carried out, will journey for a year in far lands, including Sicily, Egypt and Palestine. Mrs. Randall will accompany him and the best wishes of Brown men will follow them.

Dean Randall has been in Europe twice, the last time being 29 years ago, when he took his Sabbatical. It has been a long time between Sabbaticals with this earnest and devoted university officer. His plans after his year abroad are not yet determined upon, but we trust that he will make his permanent home in Providence, where his academic and social relationships centre.

Dean Randall was born in North Stonington, Connecticut, on February 28, 1860, and will therefore reach the academic retirement age next winter. We venture to say, however, that few persons ignorant of what Who's Who in America says about the Dean's age would guess he was within several years of the so-called Scriptural goal. He is vigorous in mind and body, alert in walk and conversation, deeply interested in life as he sees it, and particularly in everything pertaining to the welfare of Brown. The University never had a more loyal friend.

Dean Randall in recent years has been called upon to do a good deal of travelling and missionary work in behalf of Brown. He has made many contacts with desirable preparatory school students in all parts of the country and has personally persuaded a substantial number of such students to come to Providence for their collegiate education. He has represented the University at many alumni gatherings and has developed an earnest and forceful mode of public address.

Of his daily tasks as Dean we have less right to speak, since these are largely matters over which, in the nature of things, the veil of secrecy is apt to be drawn. But we know enough about the difficult work of his office to realize that he has been confronted in his 17 years as Dean with innumerable cases calling for discretion and judgment, and that he has gradually evolved, as a man is pretty sure to do in such circumstances, a workable philosophy of discipline and its bearing on life. We trust that we violate no propriety when we say that within the last few months he has been required to handle matters of unusual delicacy and that the methods and spirit he has employed in handling them have displayed him at his best, mingling firmness and fairness, and bringing the University through vexed waters to safe harbor.

Dean Randall could easily write a book concerning his experiences with college undergraduates. Indeed in a long series of articles contributed within the last two or three years to the Providence Journal he has printed the equivalent of a bulky volume on these experiences. As Deans in general could no doubt tell us, there is no better way to get an intimate knowledge of an important cross-section of American society than to administer for a term of years the disciplinary office in a sizeable institution of the higher learning.

Dean Randall came to Brown as a Freshman in 1880, so that when his Sabbatical year is ended and his formal connection with the University is thus closed, he will have been—excepting a single year, 1884-85—associated with it for a full half century. He received the degree of A. B. in 1884, that of A. M. in 1887, and that of Ph. D. in 1896. He taught for a year in the Providence High School, and thereafter took up the task of instruction at Brown, first in mathematics and civil engineering, and eventually became professor of mechanics and mechanical drawing. He was chosen to be Dean of the University in 1912, succeeding Alexander Meiklejohn '93, who resigned to become President of Amherst College; the only other Dean at Brown was Winslow Upton '75, who was succeeded by Dean Meiklejohn in 1901.

It is a strange fact that Dean Randall, whose teaching career has been along the line of engineering and mechanics, should have intended originally to teach Greek. One of his own stories about himself runs like this: In an academic procession that was one day making its way across the Brown campus, he found himself walking with the late Professor Manatt of the Department of Greek. Dean Randall took occasion to make some comment on the moment's happenings that involved a Classical reference, whereupon his companion stopped (rather disastrously to the progress of the procession). He looked astonished at hearing such a reference from a professor of non-Classical branches. "Where did you get that?" he abruptly questioned. "Perhaps you did not know, Professor Manatt," was the reply, "that I intended, when I came to college, to fit myself for a professorship of Greek." "Well, young man," the ardent Hellene replied, "you started right."

We wish to put on record our sincere appreciation of Dean Randall's half-century of loyal and fruitful service in behalf of the University, and to express the wish that he may have many years in which to enjoy the larger liberty to which he is now destined. It is one of the durable satisfactions of his long career that he has made thousands of Brownian friends who will be glad to greet him and renew their friendship with him wherever he goes.

Brown and League Baseball

DURING the last month the announcement has been made that the six colleges that have been members of the eastern basketball league will play as a baseball league also. These colleges are Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Dartmouth, Cornell and Pennsylvania. Two obvious omissions are Harvard and Brown. As for Harvard we can only guess at the reason for the omission. We would say that the Cambridge authorities have lately shown a decreasing tendency to bind themselves to definite year-in-and-year-out intercollegiate athletic relationships. Whether the Harvard-Princeton controversy of two or three years ago is a present factor we do not know, although we have heard an intimation to that effect. As for Brown, we can only say that so far as we know no approach was made in this direction.

Meanwhile two other suggestions of league baseball have been forthcoming. One of them includes Brown, along with Holy Cross, Fordham, Boston College, New York University, Rutgers, Lafayette, Colgate, Syracuse and Lehigh. The other is all-Catholic. As for the first suggestion, sentiment at Brown appears to be strongly hostile to it. Dr. Marvel says:

"Personally, I am not in favor of Brown's entrance into the proposed 10-team league, because it is easily seen that with nine other teams to be played in home-and-home games Brown would be forced to drop a number of other friendly rivals who have been on the University baseball schedule for years. Our schedule limit ordinarily is around 20 games, and only a few of the teams in the proposed league are on Brown's usual list of opponents.

"Since only three of the teams, including Brown, are located in New England, the league schedule would call for too much travelling on Brown's part, and the faculty rule covering absences would prohibit the number of trips the schedule would make necessary."

Coach Dubuc is inclined to favor Brown's entrance in this proposed league, but Charles P. Sisson, chairman of the Brown Athletic Council, indorses Dr. Marvel's view, and the Alumni Monthly has no hesitation in taking a similar stand.

Quality, Not Quantity

UNDER this head the Brown Daily Herald discusses the present condition of chapel services at the University. We heartily concur in its criticism and believe that the University authorities should give immediate and effective attention to the matter. The Herald says:

"Although we advocate and shall continue to advocate voluntary chapel in preference to compulsory chapel, we are willing to recognize the fact that compulsory chapel might be made much more satisfactory than it is and certainly much more justifiable. If we cannot have voluntary chapel, we should at least have a fairly commendable form of compulsory exercises in Sayles Hall.

"Why must we go to chapel and listen to uninteresting lecturers when there are numerous good speakers? Why must we sit through a ridiculous and meaningless set of exercises when we might be learning something worth while from a well-informed speaker? Why must we often give ears to a pre-breakfast organ recital and have no speaker whatsoever? In short, why has our chapel service become such an aggravating incidental in the life of the University?

"We can answer those questions. Why not this or that? Because there is not enough money behind the chapel committee with which to hire speakers who are actually worth fifteen minutes of our time. At present, the undergraduate attitude seems sufficient to prove that 15 minutes spent with the Providence Journal or the Daily Herald is of more value than anything the speakers have to say with but few exceptions. And we have not had speakers who keep us interested, because the chapel committee cannot afford to hire them.

"For this reason, we believe that we are justified in advocating a move toward voluntary chapel and at the same time an improvement in the present compulsory chapel program. If the number of chapel meetings a week were cut to three, being held at either the first part of the week or at any other part of the week so long as they fall on three consecutive days, the chapel committee would find that it had to make up but half as large a program as at present and with the same amount of money available this program would be greatly improved. Let us have chapel but once a week for each class and give us an interesting speaker, if we must have compulsory chapel. Such a move would certainly be an improvement over the present method and would lead to a successful voluntary chapel in the future."

The Old Back Campus

AT a luncheon table at the University Club in Providence, where a little group of Brown men are wont to meet, the talk reverted, some two years ago, to old times at the College. Dr. Walter Lee Munro of the class of 1879 spoke of the Old Back Campus, and the editor of the Brown Alumni Monthly remarked on the vicissitudes that had overtaken it, including the change of its name to Lincoln Field. Thereupon Dr. Munro replied in substance: "What is now Lincoln Field was never the Old Back Campus. 'The Old Back Campus,' as we knew it in my day, was what is now the Middle Campus—the space bounded on the north by Rockefeller Hall, on the east by Sayles and Wilson, on the south by George street and on the west by Hope and University."

The editor of the Monthly accordingly suggested to Dr. Munro the desirability of informing the present generation of Brown men as to the facts in the case, offering to print whatever this able historian of the class of 1879 might be willing to write upon the subject. Dr. Munro had already contributed much interesting material of a reminiscent nature to the magazine, as well as to the volume of "Memories of Brown" published some twenty years ago. The suggestion was accepted, and readers of the Monthly have had spread before them in an illuminating series of papers during the last two years an account of the Old Back Campus which will prove of larger historical value with the passage of the years.

Dr. Munro has a keen sense of humor and an extraordinary memory. He is also painstakingly accurate. He has gathered together for permanent preservation many amusing episodes connected with the mid-Victorian college, and his portraits of administrators and undergraduates are invaluable. They have a special appeal to his contemporaries, but every generation of Brunonians will find in them ample instruction and entertainment. They mirror Brown as it was when the faculty consisted of only a handful of teachers—but a handful of the choicest sifting. There were less than three hundred undergraduates, but their very sparseness of numbers wrought them more closely together than is possible nowadays.

Bonfires, the Water Procession, the illicit illumination of Hope College through a long season by means of an adroitly employed rubber tube, the elevation of a humble cow to third-story eminence, the temporary transformation of the President's horse to a zebra, the mad ringing of the college bell as a corollary to midnight conflagrations, classroom pranks and jests, comradeship and jollity—all these are portrayed in

Dr. Munro's story, which we shall be glad to have put in a separate volume and made available to every graduate and friend of Brown. The 1879 historian has performed a real service to Alma Mater, and we commend his example to historians of other periods in the life and development of Brown. He says little of serious academic accomplishments; he leaves that aspect of undergraduate activities to other pens. But he gives us a first-hand picture that we could ill afford to lose, because it is not only the product of an unusual memory—what might be called a verbatim et literatim recollection, but the product also of the author's keen and affectionate devotion to everything pertaining to Brown.

As will be seen elsewhere in this number of the Alumni Monthly, subscriptions to Dr. Munro's volume are now being asked for. We heartily commend it to all our readers.

The Old Back Campus X

CONCERNING COWS AND OTHER DUMB ANIMALS

By Walter Lee Munro 1879

STUDENTS and cows do not mix—except to the detriment of the cows. The same statement is true of horses. This is a dead issue, for to-day cows and horses no longer figure on the campus while students and autos do mix freely and frequently to the serious detriment of both.

From as far back as President Messer's time comes the tale of the countryman who came to town to find a customer for a load of cordwood. When night fell, with the wood still unsold, he took the horse out of the thills and left the loaded wagon on the Old Back Campus behind University Hall. When he came back with the old nag in the morning both cart and wood had disappeared. After long search the missing articles were found on the roof of the building. Evidently the students in those days were hard and industrious workers.

President Messer owned a farm way out in the country (it was on what is now Messer street, not far from the centre of the city) and drove back and forth in his "one-horse shay." While he was busy with his duties at the College his old grey horse rested in his stall on the campus. This program was varied one day, for when it came time for a start for home the patient animal was found peering wistfully from a window on the top floor of University Hall. It was thought that he had been assisted in reaching his lofty perch.

Even austere President Wayland was not immune to the students' pranks. He, too, had a grey horse which was kept in a barn on the college property. One morning, on opening the door of the stable, his man-of-all-work was astounded to find that the faithful beast had been converted overnight into a zebra, banded with black from head to tail, legs and all.

He closed and padlocked the door and reported to Dr. Wayland, who, confronted with this dilemma, displayed ability as a detective not unworthy of Conan Doyle himself. Having made certain that no one else had seen the striped animal, he said to his factotum, "That is good; keep the barn locked and say nothing about it to anyone; but keep your ears open and the first student you hear say 'horse' you will bring to me." Two days passed before one of the boys innocently inquired as to what had become of the President's horse. He was taken at once to Dr. Wayland, confessed his part in the affair and was furnished with turpentine and cloths with instructions not to desist from his labors until he had restored the horse to his pristine state.

President Wayland had also a cow, red with white patches, of which he was very proud. Her disposition was of the finest, her milk truly delectable. Imagine his chagrin when the admirable creature was stolen. His detective ability failed to function. The cow was gone. It was necessary to provide a substitute. News of his loss had spread widely and an animal was offered him which, though quite unlike and distinctly inferior to the missing cow, was, perforce, bought and paid for. Her horns were short and pointed, instead of beautifully curved and tipped with brass balls; her color was a solid red without a single white beauty-spot. Her milk—well, "it served its purpose." Time had deadened the President's sense of loss. Spring came and the new cow, as cows will in the Springtime, shed her coat and, lo! and behold! she stood revealed as the missing piebald beauty of yesteryear.

Enough of this ancient history. The dumb beasts and possibly "dumber" students of the sixties and seventies are the theme in hand.

One cow, sometimes two, were pastured daily "down behind the laboratory." If they had stayed there all would have been well and this tale would not have to be told. Though staked out at the end of long ropes the creatures had an irritating way of getting loose and invading the Old Back Campus. Cows are not noted for their neat habits. The boys resented the defilement of their playground. They are noted for their slow and stupid ways which make them about as easy to avoid or circumvent as a close-board fence.

One particular cow was always getting in the way when the boys were playing football or baseball. In fact she became a chronic nuisance. A cow on the baseball diamond with a long rope trailing behind her is out of place. Still this hardly justified the boys in decorating a red cow with broad bands of blue and green paint as was done in this instance. At this distance of time it is hard to see what they expected to accomplish by their artistic efforts. If they hoped for the banishment of the cow they were doomed to disappointment, for she stayed on until one day in the fall of '78.

The tale has been told before, but it is a poor story which won't stand repetition.

It had been a busy afternoon on the Old Back Campus. The fifteen (not eleven) had been practicing for Brown's first appearance in modern football, played with the pigskin.

The game with Amherst was to come in a week or two. Persistently that cow had butted in and broken up the formations, much to the annoyance of the players. The writer was trying for a position on the team (he didn't make it) and had gone to his room, 23 H. C., to change his clothes, when he heard a racket in the hall. Going to the door he was amazed to see the cow appear at the head of the first flight of stairs. She was escorted by five, possibly six, boys, two of whom, by the way, were not in college at the time though well-known on the campus and in the city. One of them afterward became and was for many years one of the most prominent of our City Fathers. They came along the hall and started up the next flight. That cow might be a perfect failure at going down stairs but going up was dead easy for her. She took them four or five at a time. All that was necessary was for the boys in front to pull upon the rope around her horns while those behind twisted her tail. Arrived upon the third floor, her head was thrust out of the window and the end of the rope thrown to someone below who pulled it taut and knotted it securely in the big staple on the front door. It was dark by this time. Lighting the gas-jet behind the cow, her tormentors tarried not upon the order of their going, but went at once.

Meanwhile a considerable group, of whom the writer was one, had gathered upon the front campus. The crowd was not remarkably quiet. Suddenly President Robinson came charging across the grass, took in the situation and threw his weight against the door. It yielded but held, as if someone in the hall was resisting his efforts. Again and again he tried until some man in the crowd, either bolder or more merciful than the rest, remonstrated "Can't you see, sir, that you are hurting the poor cow?" Dr. Robinson then saw for the first time the rope, which had become still more firmly knotted by his violent attacks upon the door. No one volunteered to assist him in untying the knots. His temper was rapidly reaching red-heat when he finally got the door open and stepped into the hall.

Just at that moment Billy Hale '80, all unconscious of what was going on, came running along the walk from U. H., burst through the door and landed in Zeke's arms. Now thoroughly roused, the President seized him by his coat-collar and shook him until the teeth of both rattled, demanding "YOUNG MAN, WHAT ARE YOU DOING OVER HERE IN HOPE COLLEGE?" Billy stammered out, truthfully enough, between shakes, "Someone told me my friend Walton, on the top-floor, was sick and wanted to see me," and was still further mystified when Zeke thundered at him, with the last and most vigorous shake of all, "DON'T LIE TO ME, YOUNG MAN; GO BACK TO UNIVERSITY HALL WHERE YOU BELONG." Billy took his advice and it was only when he got in touch with the boys outside that he found out what it was all about.

Meanwhile President Robinson followed the trail of the cow up to the third floor.

He must have wished by this time that he had remained quietly at home or established some other airtight alibi; but it was too late for that. Evidently it was up to him to get that animal down to the ground. If only he could assert his authority as he did with Billy Hale! But that wouldn't work, for cows are born anarchists. So he mustered the "slaves" full-strength and set them to work while he himself acted in a managerial and advisory capacity. Now goats can descend stairs with perfect nonchalance; but not cows. To understand just how bad a job they make of it you would have to witness the performance. Diplomacy is wasted on a cow. Even twisting the tail loses weight as an argument. Furthermore, President Robinson's ruffled temper and the thought of his supper awaiting him at home called for vigorous measures. The "slaves" were ordered to push the animal down the stairs. They obeyed. "Facilis descensus Averno." Once started on her downward course she lost her feet, rolled down the whole flight and landed in a heap at the bottom. If descent of the first stairway was bad, the second was worse; but at last the poor beast was down and led away to her stable.

With her departure the Old Back Campus saw the last of its bovine intruders; not wholly, nor even principally, on account of the indignities heaped upon this poor animal, but because a few short months thereafter saw the beginning of the changes which were destined to convert it, with its throngs of hallowed associations, into the prosaic Middle Campus of to-day.

"Dr. Nichols of Worcester"

By Lawrence C. H'roth, Librarian of the John Carter Brown Library

IN the death, on February 19, of Charles Lemuel Nichols, M. D., Brown '72 (A.M. 1875, Litt.D. 1918), Brown University lost a devoted alumnus and Fellow (since 1918), who with characteristic humbleness of spirit regarded the service he rendered her as a privilege and made of the duties that fell to him on her behalf a source of interest and pleasure. Dr. Nichols, the son of Dr. Lemuel Bliss and Lydia Carter (Anthony) Nichols of Worcester, was born in Worcester on May 29, 1851. He entered Brown from the Highland Military Academy and upon his graduation in 1872 proceeded to the Harvard Medical School, whence he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1875. In the same year he received the degree of A. M. from Brown, where he had pursued graduate studies and in the session 1872-73 had acted as instructor in chemistry. After a year as an interne in the Homeopathic Hospital of New York, he returned to Worcester and carried on the practice of medicine there in association with his father until 1883. After the death of the elder physician in that year, he continued his active and successful practice in Worcester until the beginning of his last illness in November, 1928. Completely identified with the interests of his native place, it was as "Dr. Nichols of Worcester" that he came in time to be spoken of, and by this appellation that he was proud of being known, in spite of the many points at which he touched the greater world in the course of his continuous participation in its philanthropic, scientific and literary activities. He was the founder of the Associated Charities of Worcester and active in the work of its Public Library and Art Museum; and in spite of a continually broadening sphere of interests he remained always a force in the social, charitable and municipal affairs of his city. As president of the American Antiquarian Society, he occupied a position of great local importance in Worcester that is at the same time second in interest and in dignity to no honorary position in the United States.

Dr. Nichols's social and literary activities led him to many cities and to wide associations. He maintained membership in clubs and organizations in several cities other than his own; among these were the Union Club of Boston, the Hope Club of Providence, and the Club of Odd Volumes, of Boston (president 1926, 1927). He was a member also of the Bibliographical Society (London), (member, American Executive Committee, 1928); the Committee of Management of the John Carter Brown Library; the Massachusetts Historical Society; the Colonial Society of Massachusetts; a Fellow of Brown University; vestryman and warden of All Saints, Worcester, and more than once a delegate from his diocese to the General Convention of the Episcopal Church. In none of these organizations was his membership merely perfunctory. The breadth of his interests, the activity of his mind, the soundness of his judgment and his eagerness to serve made him always a prominent and, literally, an active member of any association he entered.

Dr. Nichols's activity in literary and bibliographical matters began with his early interest in Isaiah Thomas of Worcester, the printer and historian of printing. His Bibliography of Worcester, 1899 (2d.

ed. 1918), was followed in 1912 by his Isaiah Thomas, Printer, Writer & Collector, a work that placed him unforgetably among the bibliographical writers of his time. Articles on the "Boston Edition of the Baskett Bible," the "Literary Fair in the United States," "Notes on the Almanacs of Massachusetts," the "Various Forms of the Columbus Codex," and "Justus Fox, a German Printer of the Eighteenth Century," appearing in several different literary publications, illustrated the scope of his interests and the breadth of his sympathies. It was in the preparation of his earlier books that he first became interested in the Antiquarian Society. Since 1897 he had been one of a loyal group of members that have helped give national importance to that ancient institution, and his long service was recognized by his election to the presidency in 1927. He made an extraordinarily fine collection of the imprints of Isaiah Thomas, and beginning some thirty years ago, he brought together slowly and lovingly a distinctive collection of books from fifteenth century presses. His activities as collector and writer of books and articles on bibliography brought him into contact with scholars, booksellers and collectors in many parts of the world, and to all of these "Dr. Nichols of Worcester" stood for something fine in their experience. His service to the John Carter Brown Library was of the highest order, and offered frequently at genuine personal sacrifice. His friendliness and his sympathy in all problems of administration, and his aid in the selection of books for the collection will always be remembered by his fellow members of the Committee and with even better reason by the members of the staff.

This recital of the activities of Dr. Nichols has necessarily dealt so largely with externals that little can now be said of a more intimate character. But it would be a grave omission to fail to mention the friendliness of heart that impressed itself upon his most casual acquaintances, and the high spirits and the habit of embellishing his talk with stories and recollections drawn from a rich experience of life, that were the characteristics of his daily intercourse.

Leaving religious controversy to others, he observed the forms of the church he loved, thought liberally and reverently, and lived the good life of work and love and play. Those who knew him well remember that nothing so moved him, nothing so thrilled him, as the hearing of a good deed. "The greatest man," says one of the characters in an old novel, "is he who rejoices most in great fulfillments of the will of God." The terms of this generalization may be defined to suit the individual taste, but the friends of Dr. Nichols will perceive its substantial truth and its particular applicability to the facts of his life and character.

Dr. Nichols was twice married, first in 1877 to Caroline Clinton Dewey of Worcester; second in 1884 to Mary Jeanette Brayton of Fall River. He is survived by his son, Charles L. Nichols, Jr., and by his daughters, Mrs. George A. Gaskill and Mrs. Daniel W. Lincoln, all of Worcester.

ALBANY

Snow, rain and sleet failed to interfere much with the annual meeting of the Brown Club of Albany, Schenectady and Troy which took place at the University Club in Albany, Friday evening, April 12. Not in a long time has the Alumni Secretary enjoyed himself more than he did on this occasion. (And it wasn't because he had his chance to do all of the talking). President H. W. Hastings '04, Secretary L. P. Atkins '20 and Harry S. Harding '05 were pleasant hosts; the dinner was excellent; and there was prevalent a refreshing Brown spirit. It was good to see the Stedmans (three of them), Rev. E. W. Babcock '74, Professor Arthur L. Eno '05, Bob Dewey, Monty Mason, Carl Reed, Frank Singiser and all the others who listened patiently as the Alumni Secretary told his story of the Hill. C. M. Graves '95 did the introducing with neatness and humor. Secretary Atkins read a creditable report and George Campbell '07 gave an account of his return to the campus last Visiting Day. At the business meeting Campbell was elected president and Atkins was re-elected secretary and treasurer. Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president-elect of the University, sent a letter extending good wishes to the club and saying that he

News From the Brown Clubs In All Parts of the Country

By A. H. Gurney, Alumni Secretary

AS spring begins to shorten and Commencement approaches, activities of the Brown Clubs are subsiding. The year 1928-29 has been a busy and gratifying one from the Associated Alumni standpoint.

The high lights of the year have been the dinners in Boston, Chicago and New York, the visit of Dean Randall to the Middle West and the meetings of Dean Mason with various alumni groups for the purpose of furthering the new Brown plan of having alumni play their part in selection of applicants for admission.

This missionary work undertaken by Dean Mason as Director of Admissions means a great deal to the betterment of Brown. It will bring to Brown, we believe, a high grade of students. It will tend to make Brown more national in scope. In many sections it will surely increase the prestige of Brown. Every alumnus who has the welfare of Brown at heart and who is willing to do something for the college can aid Dean Mason in his work by suggesting really desirable boys as candidates for Brown and by interviewing carefully and fully any applicant whose name is sent him from the Registrar's Office.

NEW YORK

The annual concert and dance of the Brown Musical Clubs, given under the auspices of the Brown University Club of New York, took place at the Waldorf-Astoria March 27. The clubs this year, we are pleased to record, seemed to be of particularly good quality and the concert was excellent. We inveigled Gene Ware, coach of the clubs, into giving a few solo numbers, and Gene's offerings went over "with a bang."

Some three hundred people were present, among them a considerable number of undergraduates; and nearly everybody stayed for the dancing which continued until one o'clock. It may be said in passing that the undergraduates appear to be exercising better taste as the years go by, because we saw more good-looking young women at the concert and dance than we have ever seen at any Musical Clubs affair we have attended. The committee in charge was composed of Joseph H. Farnham '14, Leon B. Savacool '14, Brenton G. Smith '11 and your correspondent.—P. L.

Notes

The Annual Field Day of the club will take place at the Pomonok Country Club, Flushing, N. Y., Tuesday, May 14. Brown men visiting New York at the time of the outing are urged to attend for all day, part of the day, or for dinner in the evening—whichever suits their convenience. Detailed information as to would do his best to visit the club next year.

After adjournment to the main dining room of the University Club, George Campbell produced a motion picture machine and an operator, and the alumni followed with interest the showing of two reels of campus scenes and figures made by Professor W. H. Kenerson '96.

WASHINGTON

On April 6 the Brown Club of Washington was fortunate in having as guests and speakers of the evening Dr. Mead and Dr. Koopman. The attendance was by far the best of the year. Dr. Koopman repeated his appeal for funds for the expansion and endowment of the John Hay Library and described effectively the compliments paid Herbert Putnam '14, honorary, at the time of Mr. Putnam's thirtieth anniversary as Librarian of Congress.

Dr. Mead, genial and plain spoken, brought to the attention of all of us the great changes taking place in the Faculty, discussed administrative problems and talked about the Graduate School. He made his points in his easy and logical manner.

Officers for the new year beginning next fall were named as follows: President—Ernest R. Cleveland '14; Vice President—William R. Boger '26n; Secretary-Treasurer—John C. Weedon '27. The attendance most of the present year has been fairly representative of the Washington group, with Dr. Dana C. Munro '87 and Dr. Edwin Grant Dexter '91 heading the older alumni and Jack Weedon and the president (D. D. Grubbs) the younger men.

CHICAGO

The first issue of The Brown Derby, published "spasmodically by the Brown University Club of Chicago," has come to hand, and we have read it with great interest. Frank A. Farnham, 2nd, '16 has his name at the masthead as editor. We suspect that John Monk '24 is his star reporter.

The issue contains a summary of the annual dinner of the Chicago alumni, which we recall with pleasure, gives a report of the Regional Conference held the afternoon before the dinner for the purpose of bringing the Brown clubs in the Middle West into closer contact for the better development and advancement of Brown interests, tells of the visit of Lester L. Falk '06 to Providence for the meeting of the Advisory Board in February, introduces C. H. (Bud) Edwards '30 as a Chicago boy who came to Brown and made a name for himself by being elected captain of next fall's football team, and adds bits of local color by describing the fight by Paul Herriott '20, one-time Brown football star, to win a seat on the Board of Aldermen of Chicago.

With the Brown Derby also came the first annual report of Secretary-Treasurer Monk, which is a credit to the club and to him. We quote the final paragraph: "All in all, we close 1928 with encouraging indications that the Brown University Club of Chicago has made progress during the past year, is in a splendidly healthy condition—to which the Regional Conference and the annual banquet testify—and faces the coming year with assurance that progress will be maintained and increased." The officers of the Chicago Club are: President—David L. Jones '24; Vice President—John Monk '24; Secretary—Frank A. Farnham, 2nd, '16; Assistant Secretary—Joseph L. Strauss, Jr., '28; Treasurer—W. Kenneth Anderson '28. "A youthful crew, greatly in need of your support if the Brown Club of Chicago is to continue to set the pace," says The Brown Derby pertinently.

AKRON—CANTON

Under the leadership of William A. Maguire '18, the Brown men in Akron and Canton, O., met at the University Club in Akron Thursday evening, March 28. We are sure that Mr. Maguire will not object if we print in part the letter he wrote the Alumni secretary after the gathering:

"This is the first meeting of the Akron Brown Club," he said. "I am glad to say that every alumnus of Canton was present. A delegation was headed by Sammy Dreyer '22 and Hal Broda '27. The Canton club is the liveliest club in this section. The members meet every month in Canton and give a cup yearly to one of the Canton high schools. They brought with them to Akron a prospective Freshman.

"John G. Getz, Jr., '28, gave an interesting talk on present conditions at Brown and athletic prospects, which was very much appreciated by some of the older alumni. We have formulated plans to hold regular meetings. The next meeting will be held in Canton and Sammy Dreyer expects to have Dean Mason as the speaker. We are also planning to have a golf tournament this summer. The following were present at the dinner: Charles E. Bryant '01, Hal Broda '27, Sammy Dreyer '22, Bill Leach '31, John G. Getz, Jr., '28, George H. Gates '23, H. T. Waller '01, Jonathan Taylor '07, J. U. Fogle, Jr., '27, Owen Walker, and William A. Maguire '18."

(One name that we noted as missing is that of Samuel A. Steere '07. In writing Billy Maguire to congratulate him on the formation of the Akron-Canton Club, we mentioned Sam's absence, and Billy replied that "it was Steere's idea that we get the Brown men in this vicinity together. I am sure that the only reason he did not attend was because he was out of town. You know, he has a pretty important position with the Good-year Company which keeps him on the road quite a bit."—A. H. G.)

BOSTON

A well-attended luncheon was held March 29 to honor Fred T. Field '00, recently appointed Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. Our guest had little to say about his appointment, his comment being that judges, according to tradition, were supposed to be reserved and not interested in outside affairs. He hoped, however, that his freedom would not be curtailed too much. Then he told us about some of the work of the Corporation, and his story was of genuine interest to all of us because we hear so little about the Corporation doings. He spoke of the plans to build up the Graduate School, explained the benefits that such a school will have on the Faculty and the undergraduate body, discussed Pembroke College briefly and referred to other problems now under consideration.

Stanley C. Lary of the Department of Education and Vocation of the University Club followed Justice Field with an account of what his department is trying to do to place men with at least two years of college training. This department, growing rapidly in scope and efficiency, is getting the support of all the important corporations and companies in New England, the alumni groups of Boston, and the colleges themselves.

Bill Sykes announced that the University Club was having the Brown Musical Clubs as the feature of the club night on April 17. Bill is a very active member of the entertainment committee of the University Club and through his efforts the Brown musicians were chosen for the April date. The luncheon was the first of the year under the administration of President George S. Burgess '12—P. P. M.D., Jr.

PORTLAND

As the printer was politely calling for last copy, arrangements were under way for the annual meeting and dinner of the Brown Club of Portland (Western Maine). Dean Mason and the Alumni Secretary were planning to represent the University, and George S. Ellis '94, president, and Robert F. Skillings '11, secretary, were making effort to get out a record delegation to show the guests the meaning of genuine Maine hospitality.

DETROIT

President-elect Clarence A. Barbour was the special preacher at the Easter services of the First Baptist Church of Detroit, and the Brown Club of Detroit received an invitation to hear and meet him by arrangement between Rev. Frederick A. Lankin, acting pastor, and Henry B. Selleck '09, president, and Robert E. Soellner '24, secretary of the Detroit group. A section of the church was reserved for the use of the Brown men until a few minutes before service began. Dr. Barbour spoke in the morning on "The Song of Victory" and in the evening on "The Other Side of the Hill."

PROVIDENCE

Members of the Brown Club of Providence were guests of the Faculty Club at an informal smoker held at the club, 13 Brown street, April 25. The special program, announced as this number of the Alumni Monthly was on its way to press, included short talks by Dr. A. D. Mead, vice president of the University, and Professor Will Taylor, head of the Art Department.

The March luncheon of the club introduced Professor James P. Adams of the Department of Economics as the speaker, with "Educational Costs" as his subject.

LYNN

Arthur W. Pinkham '02 was host to the Brown Club of Lynn at its meeting April 15. Edward L. Sittler, Jr., '30, member of the Brown swimming team, intercollegiate champions of New England, and the Alumni Secretary were present from the University. The Alumni Secretary gave account of the doings on the Hill, with a request to all Brown men in the Lynn area to come back to Commencement, and Sittler told of the type of applicants who would make desirable undergraduates at Brown. President Frank E. Marble reported on the Lynn Scholarship Fund and outlined work that the club is carrying on to keep a succession of Lynn boys in the University. Warren C. Norton '10 resigned as secretary of the club, and J. R. Quick '28 was elected to fill the vacancy.

Following the meeting there were refreshments, with Mrs. Pinkham acting as hostess. The thanks of the club and of the visitors from College Hill go to the Pinkhams for their hospitality.

BROWN ENGINEERS

With Professor Arthur E. Norton '00 of the Faculty of the Harvard Engineering School as the speaker, the Brown Engineering Association held a spring meeting at the Boston City Club April 26. Professor Norton spoke on "The Accomplishments of the Harvard Engineering Society." Dean Randall was the Brown representative and Professor W. H. Kerson appeared in his role of motion picture operator, showing his campus movies. The engineers will meet in New York Friday, May 17—a date to put in your book right away, if it is not already there.

Brown Graduate School Awards Scholarships

DEAN R. G. D. Richardson of the Graduate School of Brown University announced on April 9 the award of Graduate Fellowships for 1920-30, amounting to approximately $20,000. The fellowships go to students in chemistry, biology, English, history, mathematics and Romance languages.

These students, selected from many applicants, come from many colleges and universities and from all parts of the country—the Pacific Coast, the Southwest and Middle West as well as the East and South, and also from Canada. They testify to the effort being directed toward making the school truly national in its scope.

The Graduate School in Brown was one of the first to establish a limitation of numbers. The limit was set in the belief that a graduate school has as its function the fostering of quality, not quantity. All-year study is encouraged by concessions in regard to tuition charges for those Fellows who devote their full time to study for at least 11 months in the year.

Five years ago several large fellowships were established for the Department of Chemistry and the number of graduate students was limited to 25 full-time men. The result has been to place the department at Brown in the front rank of such departments in American universities.

Three years ago fellowships were announced for the Departments of Biology, English, History, Mathematics and Romance Languages, and these departments are already feeling the stimulus.

List of Awards

The list of awards for 1929-30 is as follows:

Jesse Metcalf Fellowships in Chemistry of $1000 each to Wade B. Robinson, Olean, N. Y., B. S., Hobart College, 1926, Sc. M., Brown, 1928, and Gordon K. Teal, Dallas, Tex., A. B., Baylor University, 1927, Sc. M., Brown, 1928.

Henry D. Sharpe Fellowships of $1000 each to Jesse P. Greenstein, New York, B. S., Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, 1926, Sc. M., Brown, 1928 (biology); Paul T. David, Toronto, Can., A. B., Antioch College, 1928 (economics); Israel J. Kapstein, Providence, A. B., Brown, 1926, A. M., 1929 (English); Bruce M. Bigelow, Norwood, Ph. B., Brown, 1924, A. M., Harvard University, 1927 (history); Derrick H. Lehmer, Berkeley, Cal., A. B., University of California, 1927, Sc. M., Brown, 1929 (mathematics); Mildred E. Carlen, Providence, Ph. B., Brown, 1924, Sc. M., 1927 (mathematics).

The Morgan Edwards Fellowship of $1000 to Edwin K. Gedney, Kingston, N. Y., Ph. B., Brown, 1926, Sc. M., 1928 (geology).

University Junior Fellowships of $750 each to Claude D. Williams, Buckhannon, W. Va., B. S., West Virginia Wesleyan College, 1922 (biology); Frederic C. Schmidt, Providence, Sc. B., Brown, 1927, Sc. M., 1928 (chemistry); Walter Katznelson, Providence, Ph. B., Brown, 1925, Sc. M., 1927 (chemistry); Raymond A. Vingee, Phelps, N. Y., B. S., Hobart College, 1926, Sc. M., Brown, 1929 (chemistry); Emily R. Squires, Vermillion, N. D., A. B., University of North Dakota, 1928 (English); W. Vann Parker, Chapel Hill, N. C., A. B., University of North Carolina, 1923, A. M., 1924 (mathematics), and Frederick B. Agard, Providence, A. B., Brown, 1928 (Romance languages).

DuPont Fellowship in Chemistry of $750 to J. Edward Smith, Chattanooga, Tenn., B. S., University of Chattanooga, 1927, Sc. M., Brown, 1928.

Rice Fellowship in Chemistry of $700 to Clarence S. Sherman, Asbury Park, N. J., Sc. B., Brown, 1927, Sc. M., 1928.

University Junior Fellowships of $550 to Edmund G. Johnson, Kalamazoo, Mich., A. B., Kalamazoo College, 1928, Sc. M., Brown, 1929 (chemistry); Paul B. Bien, B. S., Shanghai College, 1925, Ph. B., Brown, 1928, Sc. M., 1929 (chemistry); Hendrik Romeyn, Salt Lake City, Utah, A. B., University of Utah, 1929 (chemistry); Hope F. Kane, Pontiac, A. B., Brown, 1927, A. M., Radcliffe College, 1928 (history); Edward Sellers, Philadelphia, A. B., Swarthmore College, 1928 (mathematics).

E. L. Marston Fellowship of $750 for a student from the University of Texas, to Andrew F. Moursund, Jr., A. B., University of Texas, 1923, A. M., 1927 (mathematics).

S. W. Marston Scholarships of $500 each, for students from William Jewell College, to Howard G. Payne, Trenton, Mo., A. B., William Jewell College, 1928 (English), and Paul L. Sturges, Carrollton, Mo., William Jewell College, 1929 (English).

University Scholarships in Chemistry to Osborne C. Bacon, Campbell, N. B., B. S., Colby College, 1929; Sivert B. Glarum, Alberta, Mich., A. B., Kalamazoo College, 1929; Owen N. Hillman, Edgartown, Mass., A. B., Clark University, 1929; Gilman S. Hooper, A. B., Colby College, 1929; Homer P. Smith, Longmeadow, A. B., Brown, 1929, and Frank E. Toonder, Kalamazoo, Mich., A. B., Kalamazoo College, 1929.

There have also been awarded the Arnold Archaeological Fellowship of $500 to Belinda E. Snow, A. B., Brown, 1926, A. M., 1928, and the Anne Crosby Emery Alumnae Fellowship of $500 to Lulu A. Vorleck, Ph. B., Brown, 1929 (mathematics).

Major Sport "B's" Granted to 58 Athletes

SWIMMING and wrestling have been permanently ranked as major sports at Brown, the 1928-29 teams in these activities having had especially fine seasons.

The Brown Athletic Council has gone on record as favoring the elimination of the minor letter in all sports, and the eventual granting of major letters in all of them. This move is to be made gradually, however, and only as the teams indicate that they are entitled to equal rank with the other teams, the decision to be based on the interest in and development of the particular sport.

Fifty-eight members of the eight winter sports teams in Varsity and Freshmen wrestling, swimming, basketball and hockey have been awarded their athletic insignia and the four managers of the Varsity teams have been granted their letters in one of the largest distributions of awards in the history of Brown.

The managers—C. C. Parsons, Washington, D. C., hockey; A. W. Marten, Cleveland, O., basketball; R. B. Sincere, Cleveland Heights, O., wrestling, and Allen L. Atwood, Janesville, Wis., swimming.

The men honored in their respective sports follow:

Wrestling—Captain Harry Cornsweet, Cleveland, O.; A. C. Cornsweet, Cleveland, O.; D. E. Alper, Brookline, Mass.; R. G. Anderton, Providence; I. E. Cardon, Queens Village, N. Y.; K. E. Stein, New York, N. Y., and Walter A. Wentworth, 2d, Watertown, Mass.

Swimming—Captain Clyde C. Barrows, Providence; N. P. Arnold, Wakefield, Mass.; P. K. Bearce, East Providence, R. I.; D. K. Borden, Fall River, Mass.; C. F. Brace, Nyack, N. Y.; R. S. Hall, Lynn, Mass.; S. J. Henry, Jr., Washington, D. C., and E. L. Sittler, Jr., Uniontown, Pa.

Basketball—Captain H. R. Smith, Stratford, Conn.; P. A. M. Snyder, Franklin, Pa.; W. L. Fogarty, Flushing, N. Y.; Louis Faiber, Pawtucket, R. I.; R. O. Brown, New London, Conn.; H. Heller, Willimantic, Conn.

Hockey—Captain Philip M. Lingham, Littleton, Mass.; H. A. Crins, Providence; A. R. Walls, Edgewood, R. I.; R. E. VanWickle, Mattawan, N. J.; E. W. Perrine, Hightstown, N. J.; G. E. Crane, Providence; E. C. Mayo, Watertown, Mass.; W. E. S. Moulton, Dorchester, Mass., and E. C. Ahern, Edgewood, R. I.

Freshman Basketball—Captain J. G. Sawyer, New Rochelle, N. Y.; H. L. Harris, Mansfield, Mass.; C. C. Tillinghast, Jr., New York; J. W. Freeman, Jr., Central Falls; E. W. Vreeland, Glen Ridge, N. J.; P. H. Lewis, New York; L. H. Batis-tini, Hartford, Conn., and G. W. Jensen, Newport.

Freshman Hockey—Captain D. H. Scott, Newton Centre, Mass.; J. S. Flynn, Providence; S. C. Paige, Providence; R. A. Hurley, Jr., Providence; R. M. Hutton, Wollaston, Mass., and J. S. Daniels, Manchester, N. H.

Freshman Swimming—Captain P. W. Koebig, Millburn, N. J.; A. A. Battigan, Providence; H. S. Butler, New York; R. H. Carpenter, East Providence; D. F. Coffin, Detroit, Mich.; A. E. Linde, Mount Vernon, N. Y.; A. R. Pearsall, Arlington, N. J.; W. H. McSoley, Jr., Eden Park, and D. Gardner, Providence.

Freshman Wrestling—Captain C. H. Owrey, Swarthmore, Pa.; G. A. Teitz, Newport; B. Spiwak, Elmhurst, N. J.; W. T. Hilliard, 3rd, Salem, N. J., and N. Chaset, Providence.

William Carey Poland

(Editorial in the Providence Journal, March 20, 1929)

THE death of William Carey Poland, Professor emeritus of Brown University, in this city last evening, leaves the college and the community poorer in a very true sense of the word.

Professor Poland was first of all a lovable man. One of his faculty colleagues said of him last night: "He had a golden courtesy," and everyone who knew him will testify to the accuracy of this characterization. His first impulsive thought was kindly; it hurt him to inflict pain; he was not merely temperate but generous in his judgments; his manner was at the same time simple and urbane. Although himself a well-grounded scholar, he was modest in the display of his scholarship. He granted to friendship sometimes a larger talent or merit than it possessed. He was at the farthest possible remove from self-boasting, though he was not wanting in quiet confidence and dignity.

Professor Poland, in the course of his long life, showed a remarkable versatility of interest and attainment. Graduating from Brown in the class of 1868, he received in succession from that institution the degrees of bachelor and master of arts and doctor of letters. At the age of 22 he was appointed principal of Worcester Academy. Later he was instructor and assistant professor of both Latin and Greek at Brown, and at the age of 46 he was called upon to abandon his classical teaching and become professor of the History of Art at the University. To make so radical a change in his daily task at so mature a time of life required a flexible mind and willing spirit. He interpreted the summons not merely as a duty but as an opportunity. With characteristic thoroughness and zeal he threw himself into his new work, and hundreds of his students will bear witness to-day to the lofty vision of truth and beauty which was first revealed to them under his friendly instruction.

An earlier generation read Tacitus, Cicero, Homer and Herodotus with him. These were his original intimates of the college curriculum, his beloved comrades in the first phase of his teaching career. Later he colored his intellectual fancy and widened his aesthetic view by contact with the long line of artists from the primitive ages of Assyria and Egypt, through the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome, down to the latest innovators of the twentieth century. His opinions were liberal; he was no narrow champion of an epoch or a school. He found interest and quality in the most diverse methods, and was quick to understand, even if he did not always endorse, the unconventional and bizarre.

Professor Poland endeared himself to a large circle of friends by his inherent cheerfulness. He was a ready conversationalist, a delightful dinner companion. He had a flair for humorous narrative, and many who knew him well remember his choice store of New Hampshire tales—for although he lived most of his life in Providence, his boyhood was spent in the Granite State and thither he returned for many happy summers.

He found time in the midst of his other tasks to serve as President of the Rhode Island School of Design, as Director (in 1891-92) of the American School for Classical Studies at Athens, as secretary of the Commission of Colleges in New England on Admission Examinations for many years, and as President of the Rhode Island Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa. He was also the author of a number of classroom books on art and contributed to our neighborhood annals a monograph on Robert Feke, the Newport Colonial portrait painter.

Finally Professor Poland was a man of sincere and lofty character. His ideals were of the highest. He was unostentatiously but truly religious. He had a natural sense of reverence, and out of this sprang an assured serenity. He was capable of noble indignations, but in spite of these his "sweet reasonableness" shone forth. We shall recall him always with affection, though we look upon his face no more.

The University Chronicle

New Herald Board

H. O. Werner, Jr., of Providence has been elected editor-in-chief of the Brown Daily Herald for the coming year. J. E. McFadden of Chicago and A. J. Montigel of Irvington, N. J., have been elected managing editors. C. D. Kean of Providence and R. I. Blank of Des Moines, Ia., have been chosen for the Senior Board.

Werner, in addition to his activities on the Herald, is a member of the highly successful University Debating Team, a member of the Manuscript Club, and a candidate for Final Honors in English.

McFadden is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity, a member of the Junior Promenade Committee, and a candidate for the University Golf Team. Montigel is a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and a candidate for the University baseball team.

The five men elected to these executive positions for the coming year are the final survivors of an intensive Junior Competition which began last May.

Concerning the Herald, the 1929 editor said in his valedictory editorial of April 6:

"We cannot point with a finger of honest pride to any revolutionary changes which have taken place in Brown University as a result of our reforming fervor. What the Daily Herald has striven for during the past year, however, has not been the crusading pose, but rather an improvement in the accuracy and fullness of our recording of all events of interest and importance in the life of the college. Our emphasis has been placed upon news and not upon propaganda.

"We believe that we have been successful in achieving this improvement. In the meanwhile, however, our editorial policy has not overlooked the problems and deficiencies which lie in the way of Brown's continued development. The Daily Herald has consistently urged a solution of the compulsory chapel problem, an improvement in undergraduate social and eating facilities, an extension of Brown's prestige through the medium of its athletic teams and schedules, and a satisfactory solution of the fraternity rushing situation. The Daily Herald has consistently supported the advance towards progressive education offered in the Honors system of study, and the development of a satisfactory system of selective enrollment.

"These problems, and the ones similar to them, are not transient in nature, but must continually be faced and solved if the development of Brown is not to falter. They are problems which the Daily Herald, in its role of progressive undergraduate newspaper, will never fail to attack."

Student Drinking

Dean Randall has lately returned from a meeting of the Deans of the American Colleges, held at Washington. The members came almost exclusively from other parts of the country than this, though Dean Mason accompanied Dean Randall, and Dean Gauss was present from Princeton.

Dean Randall reports that the general testimony at the meeting was that the peak of undergraduate drinking has been passed. Asked as to his own opinion about conditions in this respect at Brown, he says that in his judgment the peak was reached here four or five years ago, that there is much less undergraduate drinking here now than then, and that a considerable majority of Brown students at the present time do not indulge in liquor. He stresses the point that a few intoxicated undergraduates are able to create a decided impression of student bibulousness.

Liber Bruncensis Board

Leroy Edward Rogers '30 of Waltham, Mass., has been elected Editor-in-Chief of the 1930 Liber Bru-nensis and Carroll Helme Rickard '30 of Woonsocket, Business Manager. C. F. H. Menges, Art Editor, N. P. Jones, Managing Editor; W. J. Beattie, Jr., Advertising Manager, and C. V. Booth, Circulation Manager, all of the class of 1930, and J. A. O'Neil '31, Photographic Editor, comprise the rest of the Managing Board. Those elected to the Associate Editorial Board are: L. F. Demmler, J. M. Moler, F. R. Sheldon, J. F. Paine and T. A. Crouch of the present Sophomore class. G. R. Coughlan, R. G. Mawney and W. E. Shulz, all of the class of 1931, have been elected to the Associate Business Board. J. R. Laadt '30 has been placed in charge of the Art Department.

It is expected, by the way, that the 1929 Liber, advance reports of which are distinctly favorable, will be ready for distribution during Junior Week, early this month.

A Brown Aviator Talks

Stephen A. McClellan '23, an engineer with Pratt & Whitney of Hartford, spoke to the Brown Engineering Society in the Engineering Building on Wednesday, April 17. In a most interesting and intimate way he told of the developments of aviation in which he had participated, including the race last summer from New York to San Francisco. In answer to questions he described most graphically the experience which qualified him for membership in the "Caterpillar Club," when he had to resort to his parachute to land from a plane that crumpled up with him, also his reactions when the engine of a plane dropped out and left him with a glider. The students were particularly interested in his description of the fighting in Nicaragua, in which he participated as a flying lieutenant of Marines.

It was late when he was permitted to leave the laboratory. During his visit in Providence he was entertained at dinner at the Faculty Club.

A Germanistic Society

The following named met on March 29 and agreed to form a Germanistic Society: Preston F. Arnold, A. Clinton Crowell, Alfred Herrmann, Charles J. Hill, Cecil Lewis, Albert P. Martin, R. McBurney Mitchell and Dr. Robert S. Phillips.

They believe that the study of Germanic languages, literatures and civilization should be further encouraged in this vicinity and that greater advantages can be secured for all persons interested in such subjects by the adoption of some co-operative plan.

Under the auspices of such a society lectures, readings, possibly musical and social functions could be provided every season and inquiries and opportunities for such advantages could be made known.

The society will be organized on simple lines and the financial obligations of the members will be nominal. There will be some activity this spring in co-operation with the Germanic Department of Brown University.

On Tuesday evening, April 23, Professor William Gould Howard of Harvard University delivered a Lessing Anniversary Lecture in Marston Hall as an appropriate observance of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of the German critic, essayist and dramatist, Gotthold Ephraim Lessing.

In Memory of M. S. Budlong

Brown University is made, jointly and equally with the Homeopathic Hospital of Providence, a residuary legatee of the estate of Mrs. Affie B. Budlong of Providence, widow of Dr. Martin Salisbury Budlong '90. Mrs. Budlong survived her husband only a few weeks, passing away early last month. No estimate of the value of the estate has been published.

One-half of the residue goes to Brown University for its general purposes, and is to be known as the "Martin S. Budlong Fund." The remaining half is bequeathed to the Homeopathic Hospital for the general purposes of that corporation, and is also to be known as the "Martin S. Budlong Fund."

Sigma Xi Initiates

The Brown chapter of the scientific society of Sigma Xi held its annual initiation and banquet on April 10. Professor Fowler described some of his recent Eastern travels. Professor Watson, president, introduced the speakers of the occasion. There were talks by Vice President Mead, Professor Yandell Henderson of Yale and Professor MacCullough of Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

The following were elected to full membership in the society: Howard L. Andrews, George L. Church, Edward A. Flood, Walter K. Nelson, Derrick H. Lehmer, Malcolm A. McKenzie, Wendell S. Niederhauser, Lars Onsager, Charlotte Perry, Henry B. Phillips, Harold Schlosberg, Gordon K. Teal, Charles H. Vehse.

Graduate students elected to associate membership: Paul Bien, Leo B. Geming, Vernon H. Goerke, Edmund G. Johnson, Harold F. S. Jonah, Harry L. Krall, Aubrey W. Landers, Jr., Neil R. McLeod, Robert F. Marschner, Arthur P. Melish, Andrew F. Moursund, Jr., Charles H. W. Sedgwick, Frank B. Smith, Henry B. Steinbach, Newton Underwood, Claude D. Williams, Morgan L. Williams, Helen A. Droitcour.

Undergraduates elected to associate membership: Seniors—David J. Colbert, James N. Corbridge, Albert C. Cornsweet, Donald P. Cruise, Alva E. Cuddleback, Kenneth D. Demarest, Francis X. Fagan, Pemberton L. Killeen, Edward W. Lawrence, Edward B. Medoff, Nathan E. Pass, James B. Perkins, Allan F. Pomeroy, Lester F. Shall, Harold S. Sizer, Konstantin Woloschak, Paulina A. Greene, Evelyn F. Jillson, Frances B. Leonard, Vera N. Matteson, Lulu A. Vorleck and Louise H. Woodman. Juniors—Frederick Crescitelle, Ernest A. Cutler, John S. Dziob, George C. Nutting and Frederick E. Winkler.

Good Wishes for Mr. Washburn

The following resolutions are self-explanatory:

Whereas, Reverend Arthur L. Washburn has endeared himself through many years to the successive classes of Brown University by his sympathetic interest in student life, by his understanding knowledge of student problems, and by his unflagging spirit of helpful assistance; and

Whereas, The Reverend Dr. Washburn is soon leaving for an extended tour in Europe after which he will devote his time completely to the interests and needs of the students in Brown University; therefore

Be it Resolved that we, the representatives of the four classes of Brown University and of the Cammarian Club, hereby express our deep appreciation of his work and interest and extend to him our best wishes for a happy vacation in Italy.

Brown's New Line Coach

A. Barr Snively, captain of the Princeton University football team in 1923 and assistant coach at Williams College in 1928, will be the line coach at Brown next fall, succeeding W. Douglas Lawton, who will not remain as a member of the Brown coaching staff. At this writing it is understood that all other members of the Brown staff will be retained.

Snively played at the United States Naval Academy and at Princeton as well as at Williams. He was a tackle and guard under Gil Dobie at Annapolis in 1919, the last season the "gloomy mentor" of Cornell directed Navy's grid teams. At Princeton in 1922 he was a member of the undefeated Tiger team, playing both tackle and guard, while the following year, when he led the Orange and Black, he was transferred to one of the ends. He may also serve as scout for Brown, for following his graduation he did service of this sort for Roper. Since McMillan, one of the finest centres ever seen at Princeton as well as an almost unanimous selection for 1925 All-American teams, coached the line at Brown in 1926 and was instrumental in helping to develop the undefeated "Iron Men." Princeton will have contributed two line coaches in four years to Brown. Relations will be renewed next fall with Snively's alma mater, for Brown is scheduled to play at Princeton in 1929 and 1930.

Snively was in Providence early last month, arranging terms of his contract, which is for only one season, with Coach McLaughry, Dr. Marvel, and Attorney General Charles P. Sisson, chairman of the Brown Athletic Council. He does not expect to be in the city again until fall. He is in the paper manufacturing business at Bangor, Maine.

Brown at Mt. Holyoke

Delegates from the leading colleges of New England met in the Intercollegiate Model Assembly, April 13, at Mount Holyoke College. The Brown delegation was composed of John Aiso, representing Japan; Alfred Berman, Finland; Robert Montague, Canada; William Pitts, Russia; William Southworth, England, and Eric Wendelin, France. The purpose of the assembly was to interest college students in international affairs, and to acquaint them with the procedure of the League of Nations Assembly.

The topics of international importance discussed comprised the following: (1) The Bolivia-Paraguay dispute; (2) The relation of the Kellogg-Briand Pact to the problem of disarmament and the League of Nations; (3) The right of Free Association in Trade Unions.

New Athletic Captains

Philip M. Lingham '30 has been re-elected captain of the University hockey team. He is one of the best skaters on the team and is also a baseball pitcher. He is president of the Junior class, and last year he was a member of Pi Kappa and the Sophomore ball committee. He is a son of Lingham '97, lives in Littleton, Mass., and belongs to Delta Upsilon.

Walter A. Wentworth, 2d, '31, has been elected captain of the University wrestling team. He had a great record in the season just closed, winning 9 out of 10 bouts and the New England 165-pound title. He was also a member of the 'Varsity football squad last fall. He transferred in 1927 from Annapolis. His home is in Watertown, Mass., and he is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Norman P. Arnold '31 has been elected captain of the University swimming team. During last season he lowered the Brown record in the 150-yard backstroke event more than five seconds. He holds all Brown and Brown pool marks in backstroke events as well as the New England Intercollegiate marks. In addition to swimming the backstroke, he swam second on the championship relay team and on several occasions competed in the medley relay and medley swim. He is vice president of his class and a member of Alpha Tau Omega. Arnold's home is in Wakefield, Mass.

Paul A. M. Snyder has been elected captain of the University basketball team. He was high scorer of the 'Varsity basketball team this year, tallying 154 points during the 17-game season. Last year he was one of the stars on the unbeaten Freshman quintet as well as an outfielder on the Freshman baseball squad. Last fall Snyder was a substitute end on the football squad and at present he is one of eight outfielders trying for 'Varsity posts. Snyder was recently chosen to the chairmanship of the Sophomore ball committee and belongs to Phi Kappa Psi. He lives at Franklin, Penn.

Intramural Sports

Brunotes for April says: While the shift from Lyman Gymnasium to the new gymnasium has necessitated a complete rearrangement of schedules in the intra-mural department, the season to date has been marked by the same fine interest on the part of the undergraduates that has been shown in other years and the report of the fall and winter intra-mural sports indicates that 614 men have participated 2434 times and that that number of different competitors is 45.9 per cent. of all the enrollment of undergraduate men in Brown.

The total participation by classes in the winter intramural sports is as follows:

1932	171 men competed	558 times.
1931	144 men competed	453 times.
1930	68 men competed	246 times.
1929	55 men competed	180 times.
Sp.	5 men competed	13 times.
Total	443 men competed	1450 times.

Baseball Season Opens

The men on the 1929 Varsity baseball squad are: Captain N. T. Wright, Wakefield, R. I., infielder; George Rawlings, Providence, R. I., pitcher; Dave Freedman, Providence, R. I., outfielder; R. D. E. MacLean, Gloucester, Mass., first base; R. J. McGinley, South Groveland, Mass., outfielder; Phil Lingham, Littleton, Mass., pitcher; Howard Smith, Bridgeport, Conn., infielder; George Chaiklin, Bridgeport, Conn., catcher; Steve Shanosky, Lynn, Mass., catcher; F. D. Gurll, third base, New Bedford, Mass.; Al Gell, pitcher, Somerset, Mass.; Sam Flora, Warren, Ohio, pitcher; Art Sondheim, Brookline, Mass., pitcher; S. O. Marvin, Delhi, N. Y., outfielder; P. K. Bearce, East Providence, R. I., outfielder; Sam Thornton, South Manchester, Conn., infielder; Ed. Crane, Providence, infielder; Raymond D. Nillson, Avon, Mass., first base; and R. H. Clarke, Providence, outfielder.

Clarke, Bateman and Bowie, three battery candidates for the Freshman team, were held with the varsity during the recess.

A practice game scheduled with Rhode Island State College at the beginning of the season was twice called off because of the weather, as was also the game with Boston University, which was to have been played on April 13, and the Tufts game on April 17. On April 19 Holy Cross administered a bad beating, 11 to 0, to the inexperienced Brown team (Holy Cross having had the advantage of several earlier games), and on

Notes of the Month

The first day of Freshman baseball practice, April 8, brought out 30 candidates.

The first meeting of track candidates brought out 25 men. Coach Powers believes the prospects unusually bright.

The Sophomore Ball at Sayles Hall on April 26 was a gay affair. There were modernistic decorations and good music.

Dr. W. M. Kotschnig of Vienna, general secretary of the International Student Service, spent several days at Brown last month.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President of the United States last year, spoke at Brown, April 17, on "Why I am a Socialist."

Dr. Godfrey H. Hardy, Savilian professor of geometry at Oxford, lectured at Brown, April 16, on "Prime Numbers." He is rated one of the leading six mathematicians of the world.

Dr. Sherwood Eddy delivered a vigorous address at the Meeting House, March 14, with the entire undergraduate body present. His theme was social and racial co-operation and good will.

P. L. Dujardin '29, president of the University Flying Club, has secured a new American Eagle biplane in which the club will practice. It has a speed of more than 100 miles an hour and a cruising range of 500 miles.

Owing largely to other athletic engagements of aspirants for the 1929 Varsity football team the call for football practice last month brought out a disappointingly small squad, but some good work was done under Coach McLaughry's supervision.

John S. Collier '29, Olympic hurdler, has accepted a two-year position at Robert College in Constantinople. Collier will have a dual position at the international institution in Turkey, as instructor in English and faculty supervisor of extra-curricular activities. Collier is the son of Professor Theodore Collier of the Brown faculty.

Dean Willard L. Sperry of Harvard Theological School, whose name was prominently mentioned last year in connection with the succession to President Faunce, spoke at the University vesper service, March 17, on discipline. "To desire discipline," he said, "is the beginning of the realization of life"—a wholesome thought for an age so given to the contrary theory.

On Sunday, April 14, the Brown chapter of Sigma Phi Sigma attended the morning service of the Central Congregational Church in a body, in observance of Founders' Day. This organization was formerly the Bear Club, became a local fraternity under the name of Tau Delta Epsilon, and is now, as part of a well-known national society, the twentieth fraternity at Brown.

Twelve candidates for the University golf team reported on April 8. The team will probably be built around the four veterans, Captain Atwood, Manager Eastwood, W. A.

Weaver and K. T. Bosquet. W. B. Sullivan '30 and George Appel '31 appear likely to win a place on the team. Both have a low handicap rating in New York State and have been consistent winners in the Metropolitan tournaments.

Brunonians Far and Near

Faculty

Vice President A. D. Mead is a member of the Council of the Princeton University Summer School of Geology and Natural Resources, of which Professor Richard M. Field, formerly of the Brown Department of Geology is director.

His colleagues regret greatly the resignation of Professor Ralph E. Badger of the Department of Economics to accept the position of vice president of the Union Trust Company of Detroit, Mich. Professor Badger will have charge of security analysis and statistics at the bank. His assistant will be Henry Murphy, Fellow in economics at the University during the present academic year.

Professor Thomas O. Mabbott of the English Department and Lawrence C. Wroth, librarian of the John Carter Brown Library, are members of the advisory board of the new journal, "American Literature," which is being published by Duke University as the semi-official organ of the American literature group of the Modern Language Association of America. Professor Mabbott, authority on Edgar Allan Poe, was a contributor to the first number.

Professor Walter Ballou Jacobs, in addition to his extension lectures on psychology, has given his interesting talk, "Are We Born So or Are We Made So?" several times in recent weeks. His audiences have included members of the Brown University Teachers' Association, the College Club of Lowell, Mass., and patrons and friends of the Elmwood Library, Providence.

Professor Emeritus James Quayle Dealey was one of the speakers at the convention of the Southwestern Social and Political Science Association held in Austin, Texas, on March 29.

He will serve as first vice president of the association this year.

Professor Henry T. Fowler of the Department of Biblical Literature spoke before the Brown Chapter of the Sigma Xi April 10 on "Ancient Sites and Scenes," an intimate description of some of the high lights of the trip he made to Palestine during sabbatic leave last year. Professor Fowler also was the guest speaker at the dinner of the Yale Class of 1890 at the Yale Club in New York April 6.

Professor C. R. Adams and other members of the Department of Mathematics were hosts to Dr. Godfrey Harold Hardy, Savilian Professor of Geometry in the University of Oxford, who gave a special Colver lecture at the University April 16 on "Prime Numbers." Dr. Hardy, one of the leading mathematicians of the world, was exchange professor at Princeton last semester. His visit to Brown was a tribute to the high reputation that our Department of Mathematics enjoys not only in this country but also in Europe.

Dr. H. L. Koopman, the University Librarian, participated in the tribute paid Herbert Putnam '14, honorary, in Washington April 5 at the completion of thirty years of service by Mr. Putnam as Librarian of Congress. The tribute was a personal one from Mr. Putnam's colleagues and friends who appreciate what Mr. Putnam has done to lay the foundations for a library on national lines, "taking its place by the side of the great libraries of Europe, the British Museum and the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris."

Alumni

Dr. Charles Edward Hosmer, one of Brown's Old Guard, died in Lowell, Mass., April 8, 1929. He was one of the oldest residents of Billerica, Mass., a veteran of the Civil War, and "probably the only living real grandson of the Battle of Lexington." His grandfather, John Hosmer, took part in that engagement and was also present at the surrender of General John Burgoyne at Saratoga. Hosmer was born in Bedford, Mass., May 25, 1837, the son of Leander and Sophronia (Wilson) Hosmer. He prepared at Phillips Andover, received his degree with the class and planned to study at Harvard Medical School. He was taking advanced courses on the Hill when the Civil War began, and he dropped his books to enlist in Company B, Tenth Rhode Island Volunteers. At the expiration of his term of service he resumed his studies and then re-enlisted in the United States Navy as an assistant surgeon. After his honorable discharge he finished his course at Harvard Medical School, winning his M.D. in 1867. He commenced practice in Waltham, Mass., but removed in 1872 to Billerica, where he continued as doctor and surgeon until his retirement six years ago. He represented Billerica in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1896-97, served many years on the school committee, was moderator of Town Meeting, a president of the Billerica Public Library Association and a prominent factor in the Billerica G. A. R. He was married April 16, 1867, to Miss Sarah E. Breck. Two sons, three daughters and three grandsons survive him.

Rev. Henry Crocker, veteran of the Civil War, preacher and poet, died in Chester, Vt., March 22, 1929. He was born in Brewster, Mass., April 30, 1845, the son of Isaac Foster and Sally Crosby (Foster) Crocker. He studied at the University Grammar School, Providence, but enlisted as a private in the Ninth Rhode Island Volunteers, Company H, before he turned his steps toward College Hill. He was mustered out with the regiment in September, 1862, and in the following year came to Brown. He won Phi Beta Kappa in 1866 and his A. B. with the class. He was graduated from Newton Theological Institution in 1870 and ordained immediately afterward. His first pastorate was in Damariscotta, Me., and thereafter he served churches in Bristol, R. I., Fairfax and Chester, Vt. In the years of his retirement he did considerable research work, contributed to religious papers and also wrote verse. On the occasion of his 80th birthday his friends presented him with a bound volume of the poems he had written. In their foreword they wrote: "And in your life and manner we think of you as an embodiment of Gentility, an old and very precious word, almost obsolete now, which you help us recall." His two sons, Henry F. Crocker and Lawton V. Crocker '12, survive. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Professor Emeritus William Carey Poland's long and useful life ended peacefully at his home in Providence March 19, 1929. He was born in Goffstown (now Grasmere), N. H., Jan. 25, 1846, the son of Rev. James Willey and Sarah Jane (Ayer) Poland. He prepared at the Melrose, Mass., High School, and received his A. B. with his class at Brown and his A. M. in 1871. In 1904 Alma Mater conferred upon him the honorary degree of Litt. D. For two years after graduation he was principal of Worcester Academy. Then he came back to Brown and remained with the University, first as instructor and assistant professor of Latin and Greek and then as Professor of the History of Art, until his retirement in 1915. Through the years he was an indefatigable worker for the University, in class room and outside, and Brown will long remember him as a loyal son as well as a lovable teacher. The article about him elsewhere in this issue of the Alumni Monthly tells much of his active career. It is enough for this chronicler to add that Professor Poland was married March 25, 1882, to Clara Frances Harkness, daughter of Professor Albert Harkness, who survives him, together with three sons, William, a special student, Albert Harkness Poland '09, and Reginald Carey Poland '14. Professor Poland was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Delta Phi, the Providence Art Club, the Fine Arts Society of San Diego, Cal., the American Philological Association and other learned societies. His writings were numerous, dealing chiefly with art and classical archaeology. His "Necrology of Brown University, 1888-1904," is a work involving labor and research of a sort that testifies memorably to his patience, energy and loyalty.

Rev. Father Henry Harrison Wyman died in Chicago, Ill., March 6, 1929, his 80th birthday. He went to one of the Chicago hospitals to regain strength failing because of his age, but his condition grew worse until death ended his long and useful life. He was born in Westminster, Mass., March 6, 1849, the son of Harrison and Jane (Wilder) Wyman. He prepared at the Gardner, Mass., High School, and shortly after receiving his degree with his class at Brown announced that he would give up his Congregational beliefs to join the Roman Catholic Church. On Jan. 6, 1872, he entered the Paulist Novitiate and was ordained priest on March 8, 1876, by the Rt. Rev. M. A. Corrigan, Bishop of Newark, N. J., in the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, New York, where he labored until the following September. Then he became a member of the mission band and remained in missionary work until 1894, giving missions in the Eastern and Middle Western States. He also conducted missions in Chicago, San Francisco and other cities. He was the author of a booklet, "Scholastic Philosophy," and "The Story of My Religious Experiences," which recounts his conversion to the Catholic faith. In March, 1926, he celebrated the golden jubilee of his entrance into the priesthood. He always retained his interest in Brown, and it was one of his memories to have received visits from Presidents Andrews and Faunce during his years in San Francisco. In answer to a letter from the Alumni Secretary a few years ago, he said: "In the closing days of my life I find my chief happiness in thinking of God's goodness in having called me to the priesthood and service of His Holy Church." Father Wyman is survived by a brother, Alfred Wyman, of Leominster, Mass.

1877

Rev. Augustus H. Fuller is the new pastor of the Congregational Church in Ballardville, Mass. "Mr.

Fuller comes to Ballardville under exceptionally favorable conditions," said the Andover Townsman, "and everything points to the most successful period in the history of the church."

Asa E. Goddard gave an illustrated talk on "Astronomy" before the New Church Ladies' Sewing Circle of Brockton, Mass., April 4. The illustrations were a part of the Brown collection of lantern slides on Goddard's subject.

Dr. C. H. Finch is now located at 848 Elmwood ave., Providence.

The Alumni Office has confirmed the death of Clifford C. Snyder on March 12, 1928. Snyder was a member of the class for two years. He had been a manufacturer of flour for many years in Freehold, N. J., previous to his death. His widow and one son, Cecil D. Snyder, graduate of Cornell, survive him. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon.

1879

Charles P. Bennett is a member of the City Council, Colorado Springs, Colo.

1885

The death of Charles Freeman Sawyer in Newark, N. J., Dec. 22, 1928, has been officially confirmed by the Alumni Office. Sawyer was in college part of the Freshman year. He worked in Providence until 1898 when he entered the employ of the Royal Jewelry Company of New York. He remained with this company until shortly before his death. He was a charter member of the Newark Museum and for many years, before leaving Providence, a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society and the Providence Athenaeum. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Nellie A. Wake, two children, Warren and Mable Ruth Sawyer, and a brother, Moses A. Sawyer of Providence.

1886

William Allan Dyer, one of our Alumni Trustees, was the Brown representative at the inauguration of Dr. Frank Parker Day as President of Union College and Chancellor of Union University, Schenectady, N. Y., May 4.

Rev. Charles A. Parker writes that his present address is 91 Vaughan st., San Jose, Cal.

F. H. Brownell, vice president, made the report at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Smelting & Refining Company in New York on April 2. Commenting on the high price of copper, he said that "consumption of copper in this country has increased tremendously, but time can only tell how much is an actual increase and how much is due to anticipatory buying by the ultimate consumer."

James F. Denison is living at the Hotel Wentworth, 59 West 46th st., New York, which is the headquarters of the Brown Club of the city.

Robert L. Spencer announced last month that the general insurance business formerly conducted by him under the name of Spencer & Boss would hereafter be carried on at 29

Weybosset st., Providence, the firm to be known as Spencer & Preston. The junior partner is Robert S. Preston '28n.

Rev. Dr. Gerald Birney Smith's untimely death in Dayton, O., April 2, 1929, as a result of ptomaine poisoning which seized him during a motor trip through the South, was a shock to all of us. A clear thinker, a true and progressive scholar, a thoroughgoing Christian gentleman—so one of his friends has characterized him. Smith was born May 3, 1868, in Middlefield, Mass., the son of Metcalf John (then superintendent of schools of Middlefield) and Harriet (Eldredge) Smith. He came to Brown from Worcester Academy and shone as a student. For four years after graduation he taught on the Faculties of Oberlin Academy and Worcester Academy, respectively. He entered Union Theological Seminary in 1895, studied at Columbia at the same time and received his D. B. from Union and his A. M. from Columbia in 1898. He spent two years abroad as a traveling Fellow and in 1900 joined the Faculty of the University of Chicago as instructor in systematic theology. In 1902 he was ordained as a Baptist minister. At the time of his death he was Professor of Christian Theology at Chicago and one of the outstanding men in the country in his field. He was an ardent writer on theological and related subjects. His most recent book, "Current Christian Thinking," received high praise from the critics. He also wrote "Social Idealism and the Changing Theology," "A Guide to the Study of the Christian Religion," "Practical Theology" and many articles for the magazines. He gave the Nathaniel W. Taylor Lectures at Yale Divinity School in 1912, the Earle Lectures, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal., in 1921, and was popular as a college preacher. He was married July 10, 1894, to Miss Inez Michener, who survives him, together with a son, Cecil M. Smith, a graduate student at Harvard. He belonged to Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Upsilon, and the City and Quadrangle Clubs. Alma Mater gave him an honorary D. D. in 1909.

The Mirror, the year book of the Senior class at Bates College, Lewiston, Me., is dedicated this year to Professor Arthur N. Leonard, head of the German Department at Bates and former president of the Brown Club of Western Maine.

1893

The Alumni Office has received word of the death of Ben Wayland Johnson in Toledo, O., Sept. 29, 1928. At the time of his death he was a member of the law firm of Johnson, Johnson and Farber, and one of Toledo's best known and most highly respected lawyers. He served as Trustee of Toledo University from 1910 to 1916 and was a member of the American Judicature Society, American Academy of Political and Social Science, Sons of the American Revolution, Ohio State and Toledo Bar Associations, and Zeta Psi. His widow, who was Miss Kate Snow Walker, and three children, Katharine, Norman Lewis and Walker Johnson, survive him. During his undergraduate days Johnson acted as private secretary to President E. Benjamin Andrews '70. "He had many friends," said the minute of the Toledo Bar Association memorial meeting in his honor, "and practiced the old adage, 'the way to gain a friend is to be a friend'."

The late Henry A. Barker willed that one-half of his personal property estate, amounting to $250,000, should be devoted to extending the Providence public park system and endowment of a civic theatre. Parks and the theatre were Barker's great hobbies, as we all know. The other half of his estate is left in trust to his widow, Sarah Minchin Barker. Judge C. C. Remington '99 is one of the trustees.

A. W. Rowell of the Board of Tax Assessors, Manchester, N. H., is gradually recovering from an illness that sent him to the hospital during the winter and kept him at home part of the early spring.

The General Education Board has agreed to give Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., $300,000 if the alumni and friends of Morehouse will raise a similar sum; and President John Hope, in the last issue of the Morehouse Alumnus, made a strong appeal to every Morehouse man to do his part.

1895

1896

Rev. Dr. Clarence M. Gallup and Mrs. Gallup have given to the Central Baptist Church, Providence, a set of organ chimes and a vox humana in memory of their mothers, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Gallup and Mrs. Eleanor C. Hovey. The gifts were dedicated last Palm Sunday.

Judge Frederick Frost of the Seventh District Court of Rhode Island is the new president of the Economic Club of Providence, succeeding Zenas W. Bliss '16, honorary.

Rev. Henry F. Huse, pastor of the Baptist Church at North Haven, Me., got his name and picture in the newspapers last month as the minister quite likely to marry Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Anne Morrow next summer. The Morrays have their summer home at Vinal Haven and attend Huse's church.

Dr. Haven Metcalf has been appointed a member of the Forest Protection Board, the function of which is to formulate plans and policies and to co-ordinate efforts for the protection of the forests of the country against fire, insects, disease and other adverse influences.

John S. Murdock, United States District Attorney for Rhode Island, is now a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State, filling the vacancy caused by the promotion of Justice Charles F. Stearns to be Chief Justice in place of William H. Sweetland '78, resigned. Murdock had the hearty endorsement of the Rhode Island Bar Association.

George L. Miner and Mrs. Miner sailed on April 14 for an extended tour of the British Isles and Europe, during which Miner will study traffic problems and make report on his return to the Providence Chamber of Commerce and Providence Safety Council. He and Mrs. Miner took their motor car with them. In the summer they will be joined by their son, Richard S. Miner of the class of '32 at Bowdoin. Miner recently became president of the Providence Coal Company, a new adjunct of the Doe & Little Coal Company which he also heads.

1898

Rev. Lester B. Mathewson is teaching in the Practical Bible Training School, Bible School Park, N. Y. The school is situated not far from Johnson City and Binghamton and has a score of officers and teachers and a number of special instructors.

Dr. Thomas J. Burrage of Portland, Me., was a campus visitor last month, showing his son, Henry Dyer Burrage, a student at St. John's Manlius School, a close-up of Brown. Henry will be ready for college next fall.

George Langley Mills Mitchell, member of the class in our Freshman year, died in Auburn, R. I., March 14, 1929. He was born in Providence, Oct. 27, 1869, the son of John and Mary Amelia Mitchell. He prepared at Mt. Hermon and Worcester Academy, and after a year at Brown left to join the Albert

Walker Company, manufacturing jewelers, as accountant and salesman. He continued with this firm until ill health forced him to give up about two years ago. He was a deacon and trustee of the Arlington Baptist Church and assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. He was likewise active in Masonry. He was married May 5, 1896, to Edith D. Burroughs, who survives him, together with two daughters, a granddaughter, a sister and a brother.

George S. Beal of the Department of Forests and Waters of the State of Pennsylvania represented Brown at the inauguration of Mervin Grant Filler as President of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., April 26.

The sudden death of Robert Kerr Lyons in Providence, March 16, 1929, was a great shock. The end came following an operation at the Jane Brown Memorial Hospital. Bob had seemingly been in fair health and was on the campus Visiting Day. He was born Feb. 17, 1876, in Westhampton, N. Y., the son of Frank S. and Clara (Howell) Lyons. He entered Brown from East Greenwich Academy as a special student and finished with the class. In 1899 he became assistant chemist with the Silver Spring Bleachery and in 1903 chemist with the United States Finishing Co., owner of the bleachery. From 1914 to 1919 he was superintendent of the Pawtucket branch of the company and manager from 1919 to 1922. Then he resigned to accept the position of manager of The Apponaug Company, Apponaug, R. I. He had high standing as a chemical engineer; he was fine and friendly as a man. He belonged to many societies and clubs, chief among them being the American Chemical Society, American Association of Textile Chemists and Colorists, Colorist Club of New York, Providence Engineering Society, The Players and Theta Delta Chi. He was married June 2, 1903, to Minnie Leora Bartlett, Pembroke '01, who survives him, together with a daughter, Priscilla Bartlett Lyons. His mother is also living. We shall miss him at our 30th Reunion.

C. C. Remington, the Class Secretary, was re-elected Justice of the Police Court of Providence last month after a lively session of the Common Council.

Benjamin F. Haines sets down his present occupation in Altamonte Springs, Fla., as "attorney at law, farmer-grower and manager." Looks as if the well-known ex-Mayor of Medford, Mass., were becoming a dyed-in-the-wool Floridian.

The first '99 News Letter, giving preliminary details of the 30th Reunion of the Class, was mailed to all members a month ago. Ben Grim was editor, office boy and reporter; and it is one critic's opinion that Ben filled all three positions creditably.

Dr. James M. Kent and Mrs. Ketn have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Manning Kent, to Dewey Ellis of the class of '22 at Cornell. Miss Kent is a member of the Senior class

REV. A. L. WASHBURN

Rev. Arthur L. Washburn, University chaplain and former rector of St. Martin's Church, Providence, sailed on April 13 for Naples. He told a Brown Herald reporter shortly before he sailed: "I have never gone to Europe before with so much reluctance. I shall be gone over a year, but I am planning to be back in Brunonia by September, 1930." Mr. Washburn has been for years a daily attendant at chapel services, although holding no official position in the University in the past. He has been the friend of innumerable Brown students, untiring in their behalf when they have been sick or in need. He will study French and Italian while abroad.

at Vassar. The wedding will take place in September.

Harold B. Maryott has been appointed Dean of the Block School of Music, Chicago. From 1902 to 1928 he directed the Department of Public School Music in the Chicago Musical College. In his new position Maryott will have charge of the school music and theory departments.

Rev. Rolla E. Hunt, for the last twelve years pastor of the Richmond Hill Baptist Church, Richmond Hill, L. I., has begun his new work as Executive Secretary for the Affiliated Baptist City Societies of New York. His territory includes Long Island, Staten Island, Manhattan, the Bronx and Westchester County.

W. Louis Frost was recently appointed a member of the advisory committee of the American National Real Jewelers' Association.

Edward James Devine, member of the class for two years, died in Cape Elizabeth, Me., Dec. 6, 1928, according to a recent letter from George S. Ellis '94 of Portland. Devine was born in Portland Oct. 28, 1876, the son of Bernard and Theresa B. (Maney) Devine. At the Portland High School he won fame as a football player, but he did not follow the game after he came to Brown. He left College Hill in 1899 and went to Georgetown University. On his return from Georgetown he went into the drug business with his brother, Thomas F. Devine, and after a few years in this business became a bond salesman. During recent years he had traveled considerably. Shortly before his final illness he and Mrs. Devine, who was Jane L. Alden and whom he married Nov. 27, 1924, returned from a trip around the world. Devine was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

Mayor Charles H. Holt of Pawtucket was elected last month Grand Master of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of Rhode Island.

Morris E. Alling has begun his new duties as manager of Junior Achievement, Inc., with his headquarters in Springfield, Mass. In his first statement he said that "Junior Achievement has made a tremendous appeal because perhaps as well as any other agency yet found it can hold any boy or any girl anywhere, but particularly it is qualified to reach out and serve the boys and girls who are not within the circle of those otherwise provided for."

J. Cunliffe Bullock, Trust Officer of the Industrial Trust Company, Providence, was the guest of Frank W. Blair, President of the Union Trust Company of Detroit, Mich., at the dinner in Detroit April 2 to celebrate the opening of the trust company's new building.

Dr. Harry W. Rockwell, president of the New York State College for Teachers at Buffalo, N. Y., is the new president of the American Association of Teachers' Colleges. "This high honor has come to Dr. Rockwell," says a bulletin, "in recognition of his service on the accrediting and classification committee of the association, as a result of which higher standards have been set up for teacher-training institutions."

Blanding & Blanding, Inc., the oldest and largest wholesale drug company in Rhode Island, has been sold to the Eastern Drug Company of Boston and will be operated as a branch of the Boston concern, with Richard W. Blanding a vice president and director, as well as manager of the Rhode Island unit. The retail drug store of Blanding & Blanding does not enter into the transaction, according to the statement Dick gave to the newspapers early last month. The business has been in the hands of the Blanding family for three generations.

Albert Benjamin West, one of Rhode Island's best known criminal lawyers and scholastic leader of the class in his undergraduate days, died suddenly in Providence, March 26, 1929. He was walking home from a meeting when death came, the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was born in Providence Jan. 21, 1883, the son of George J. and Margaret (Hyde) West. He prepared at the Classical High School and won his A. B. and A. M. at Brown in four years. He was the best speaker in the class, a consistent prize winner and as brilliant a student as has ever been graduated from the University. In 1907 he received his LL. B. degree at Harvard Law School, took the Rhode Island bar examinations and commenced practice in Providence. He was elected to the Rhode Island General Assembly in 1911 on the Democratic ticket, and during his four years in the House made a great record for himself as minority leader. Then he served two terms in the State Senate, retiring in 1917. He brought the property qualification in the State Constitution, brought about changes in the Workmen's Compensation Act and otherwise showed himself a keen and intelligent legislator. He was much in demand as an after dinner speaker, and he was a real satirist. He kept up his reading in philosophy, history and French literature, was a devotee of the drama, and studied the piano under Gaspard Saillant. He also was an accomplished organist, with an organ in his home for his especial use. "The death of Albert B. West," said the Providence Tribune, "brings to a close a career marked by unusual brilliancy and diversity. The son of a noted criminal lawyer, George J. West, he had gained a nationwide fame for his success not only before the criminal courts but in civil matters as well." Albert is survived by his mother, two brothers and three sisters. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa.

Colonel Noble B. Judah, Ambassador to Cuba, got his name on the front page of the New York World one day last month as one of the members of the Lake Forest, Ill., colony who are paying $15,000 a year to the Chicago and Northwestern Railway for a special car in which to commute to business in Chicago and back. The car has its own buffet and porter.

William M. Bottomley, member of the class for three years, is Superintendent of Schools in Pittsfield, Me.

Fred Schiun left Attleboro, Mass., early in April for what he called "a complete rest," with Southern Germany as his destination. Fred's itinerary took him by way of the Mediterranean to Genoa, Milan, Lucerne, then to the Black Forest and its environs and finally to Bremen and back to home and work.

Leonidas Poulot, Jr., who left Brown at the end of our Sophomore year to go to Boston University Law School, from which he received his LL. B. degree, has become a Justice of the Superior Court of Rhode Island, having been elected by the General Assembly to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Presiding

Justice Willard B. Tanner '79. Since 1909 Judge Poulot has presided over the Probate Court of Central Falls, R. I. He is the first one of Franco-American descent to occupy a place on the bench of a Rhode Island high court.

Fred C. Broomhead's annual dinner for the winter sports teams at Brown, held at Fred's place of business in Providence on March 19, was a delightfully informal affair, and it testified once again to Fred's interest in the athletes and to his ability as a host. President Faunce, Dean Randall and Professor S. T. Arnold, who is to be Dean during Dean Randall's leave of absence next year, were the speakers.

We saw Harry Harding's twins during a visit to Albany last month, and they made a real hit with us. Harry also has two upstanding boys, Robert and Edgar, who, we hope, will be coming to Brown in due time. Robert is making a name for himself in Boy Scout work.

Dr. Alex M. Burgess, the University Medical Director, was inducted as a Fellow of the American College of Physicians at the convocation ceremony at the 13th annual clinical session of the college in Boston on April 12.

Rev. Dr. John E. Flemming, pastor of the Arlington Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., had his sermon, "Selling the Christian Religion," as the feature of the religious page of the New York World on April 15. There was also a good picture of John and a brief biography. His son, John E. Flemming, Jr., a student at Mt. Hermon School, sang a tenor solo as part of the musical program.

Edwin A. Kelley is purchasing agent for Remington-Rand, Inc., 465 Washington st., Buffalo, N. Y. His home address is 25 Charleston ave., Kenmore, N. Y.

Dr. Henry S. Reynolds, father of Ernest S. Reynolds, died at his home in Providence March 22, 1929. He was in his 80th year. Besides Ernest, he is survived by another son, Vinton L. Reynolds '00, special, a widow and six grandchildren.

Bill White, writing from Carleton Place, Ontario, where he is with Findlay Bros. Co., Ltd., makers of stoves, furnaces, electric and gas ranges, notes that "Norman Mc-

Planning high-speed business

An Advertisement of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company

MORE than 95% of the telephone calls from one town to another in the Bell System are now on a high-speed basis. This holds whether the call is from New Orleans to Boston or from New York to Oyster Bay.

Even if it is a long call, the operator in many cases now asks you to hold the telephone while the call is put through.

Calls from one town to another used to be handled by one operator taking your order and giving it to another group of operators to put through. You now give your call direct to the operators who put it through—and put it through fast while you are on the line. The average time for handling all toll and long distance calls in the Bell System was further materially reduced in 1928.

A high-speed service to all parts of the country—calls from one town to another as swift, clear and easy as local calls—that is the aim of the Bell System.

This is one of the many improvements in methods and appliances which are constantly being introduced to give high-speed telephone service.

Better and better telephone service at the lowest cost is ever the goal of the Bell System.

"THE TELEPHONE BOOKS ARE THE DIRECTORY OF THE NATION"

Gragor calls here on business every few months and on his next call we are planning a long talk over old times. You have no idea how much I miss the opportunity to see more of the boys and to attend some sort of get-together."

Shan Clark has been elected president of the Rhode Island Protective Company to succeed the late Henry A. Barker '93. Shan was a member of the Board of Directors of the company for six years and also served as auditor. He has already begun his new duties, and we miss him in the Industrial Trust Company's investment department, with which he had been connected since 1920.

Rev. Levi S. Hoffman is riding in a Nash sedan (not an advertisement) which was given to him by his parishioners in Lansdale, Pa.

Dana T. Gallup announces that he and his partner, Arnold Leonard, specializing under the name of Gallup & Leonard in "conveyancing, probate practice and corporation law," have associated John Warner Moore with them "and will continue the general practice of law at 918-924 Beacon bldg., 6 Beacon st., Boston, Mass."

Professor Harlan T. Stetson of the Harvard Faculty sailed April 22 for Mor-Star in the Straits Settlements in the hope of witnessing a total eclipse of the sun there on May 9. During part of the winter Stetson was exchange professor at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and, according to the Knox Alumnus, he "enjoyed the opportunity to present a college course (in astronomy) without allowing members of the class credit for the work."

1909

W. P. (Chick) Raymond has begun his 17th year as coach of the baseball squad at Middlesex School, Concord, Mass., where he is a member of the Faculty. Doesn't seem so many years have passed since Chick was winging 'em down to second base at Andrews Field and stimulating the whole team by his energy and chatter.

Chauncey E. Wheeler of the law firm of Hinckley, Allen, Tillinghast & Phillips has been re-appointed member of the Rhode Island Board of Bar Examiners for the term ending in March, 1934. Chauncey is secretary of the Board.

Phil Burbank tells us that he is with Walter Channing, Inc., real estate, 50 Congress st., Boston, and that he lives at Wayland, Mass.

H. D. L'Amoureux has changed his house address from Peekskill to 11 McKinley ave., White Plains, N. Y.

The papers say that the Cull Silk Mills, Inc., of Pawtucket, R. I., are "operating in full on double shift." The products are high-grade georgettes, crepes and satins. Joe Cull is president and treasurer of the company, and here's hoping that Joe keeps going as strong as he seems to be going at present.

1911

Arthur Staff's basketball team at Brockton, Mass., High School participated in the national schools tournament in Chicago during the spring recess and won first place in the Consolation Championship. Perhaps we don't hear as much about Art's work at Brockton as we should, but there is no question that he stands out as one of the best all-around schoolboy coaches in the country.

1912

The Tubular Woven Fabric Company of Pawtucket, of which W. E. Sprackling is President and Treasurer, has been sold to the Anaconda Wire and Cable Company. Sprack's company employs about 275 workers and under Sprack's able and vigorous management it has been very successful.

Harry G. Seidel, in charge of European production for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, has been elected a director of the company, which is the world's largest oil enterprise.

Report has it that Clarence E. Ayres is the author of a new book, "Holier Than Thou," and we are trying to get hold of a copy of it.

Harry Sutton got his picture in the Boston Transcript of April 13, and Harry was surely looking his best at the time, what with his open-face suit and smile. He was with the University Glee Club of Boston, of which he is secretary-auditor.

Randy Burgess, Wiley Marble, Bill Sprackling and Dan Brown are on the committee co-operating with the Near East College Association, Inc., which is raising a fund to carry on the work of Art Newell as Professor of History at Robert College, Constantinople. Randy Burgess is the active chairman of the committee, and Randy and the rest will feel cheerful and content if every '12 man chips in his bit to help Art on the job over there.

George Crowther is Boston sales manager for the New England Box Co., Chelsea, Mass., and is living at 65 Parker st., Newton Centre, Mass.

Dan Kulp of the Columbia Faculty got his name in the papers late in March because of a speech he made at a conference at the University of Pennsylvania in which he said that he would bar athletics in the schools. "Athletics as now taught," he asserted, "do not prepare high school students for the activities of adult life. They turn graduates into 'bleacher fans'. . . . If the high school would institute play programs and force every student to engage in some form of activity, things would be much better."

Are you DOWN-HEARTED about your GAME?

DO your chip shots fail to come off on important occasions? Have you weaknesses . . . chronic weaknesses . . . that keep you sticking around 100, never getting any better and not knowing what to do about it?

Cheer up! There may be hope!

The American Golfer . . . among other features . . . is running a series of "how-to" articles on golf by Alex Morrison that is the best medicine we have yet seen for what's wrong with your game. No theoretical or fancy stuff . . . just good, plain, practical, straightforward common sense that helps to correct your faults by correcting the causes of the faults.

Alex Morrison, in case you don't happen to know it, is rated among the best golf teachers in the business. He has been in the game for years. And he has gotten golfing fundamentals down on paper in a way that nobody else has ever done before. Dub, sub-dub or expert, you'll profit by this series.

And that's only one of the indispensable things in the Golfer. "Bobby" Jones, who in January signed up as our associate editor, is writing for us regularly. So are Bernard Darwin and Sir Ernest Holderness. Grantland Rice, Innis Brown and O. B. Keeler cover the championship tournaments . . . with photographers right at their elbows.

Then there are photographs of championship players in action, with analyses of their play . . . series of right-way and wrong-way pictures whereby all of us may profit . . . articles on famous golf courses, celebrated holes, the planning and equipment of club houses . . . a department on green-keeping . . . bridge articles by E. V. Shepard . . . and all the news, gossip and good fellowship that are part of the Grand Old Game.

There's no use laboring the point . . . you need the Golfer. Better subscribe now . . . you will eventually anyhow . . . and save yourself money and embarrassment on the course.

class in our Freshman year, is president of Buchold & Co., wool merchants, 253 Summer st., Boston. Bob lives at 37 Ashmont st., Waban, Mass.

Bill Howe, returned from a sojourn in South America for the General Electric Company, has transferred his activities with the company to Chicago and is living at 811 Judson ave., Evanston, Ill.

C. C. Parker tells us that his house address is 43 Atlantic ave., Buffalo, N. Y. The Judge is with Pratt & Letchworth, but just what he is doing with that firm he neglects to note.

Carleton Fenner Sims died in Rochester, N. Y., March 21, as the result of an infection from a blister that appeared on his heel after a game of tennis. At the time of his death he was teaching geography and mathematics and assisting in athletic direction at the Allendale School. There he was a great favorite. "His place will be difficult to fill," said Barclay H. Farr, headmaster at Allendale, "He was the friend of all the boys in the school, as well as their counsellor and teacher." Carleton was born in Providence April 25, 1891, the son of Gardiner C. and Laura (Brayton) Sims. He came to college from Lawrenceville, but did not take his degree. During the World War he served with the U. S. Army Ambulance Corps in Italy and won the Merito di Guerra (war cross) for bravery. After his discharge in April, 1919, he worked for a time in Providence and then took up teaching, which had long been his ambition. He was on the Faculty of the Longwood Day School, Brookline, Mass., for several years; and since September, 1926, he had taught and coached at Allendale School. "He had a rare understanding of boys, and his relationship with the youth who came under his instruction was more that of a friend and comrade than a teacher," an observer has written of him. In addition to his work at Allendale he took special courses at the University of Rochester and was beginning to enjoy life as a teacher when death came. Carleton was married Dec. 22, 1926, to Miss Virginia Sanger, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Sanger of Providence, and she survives him together with his mother. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

Rev. Edward I. Everett has changed his address to Kanene Ferme, Depeche Privee, Elizabethville, Congo Belge, Africa. He has plans in the making to leave the mission field next year for a visit home.

Earl K. Brown bobbed up pleasingly not long ago with a note asking about the 15th Reunion of the Class. Earl is sales representative with the Paper Makers Chemical Corporation, Kalamazoo, Mich., and he and Mrs. Brown make their home at 1016 S. Park st., in that city.

E. W. Berriman is president of Berriman Bros., cigar manufacturers, Tampa, Fla. Ed was married two years ago and his daughter, Nancy Lee Berriman, is becoming an active member of the household.

Ed Brackett's new house address is 95 Atwood ave., Newtonville, Mass. Ed is with Jackson, Storer & Schwab, investments, 24 Federal st., Boston. The arrival of Richard W. Brackett (class of '51 or '52) is recorded elsewhere.

Bob Quinn, Senator from West Warwick in the Rhode Island State Senate, had his birthday, April 2, observed by his fellow Senators, who met in special session after adjournment on that day and felicitated Bob in true brotherly style. Bob took the gavel from Lieutenant Governor James G. Connolly '09 after his well-wishers got through and thanked everybody for the felicitations.

Sidney Clifford was general chairman of the diamond jubilee finance canvass of the Providence Y. M. C. A., which lasted from April 8 to 17, and in which time Sid and his co-workers tried to raise $40,000 to meet the estimated operating deficit during the next fiscal year of the Y, beginning the first of this month.

Ernest H. Emery's new mailing address is 1327 Fargo ave., Chicago, Ill.

Wallace Stewart is still in the cotton business, the line he has followed since he left the Hill. He's sales manager for the Farish Co., cotton goods commission house, 79 Worth st., New York. He has a boy, Joseph Manton, nine years old, and a daughter, Nancy, three. The Stewart family home is 15 Rippowam Village, Stamford, Conn.

Our Tenth Reunion will be held at Jamestown June 15 and 16. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all returning members of the class at the Thorndike Hotel and it is possible, although it has not been definitely determined as this is written, that the Reunion will start Friday night instead of Saturday morning. We will have the use of the Conanicut Country Club, including golf course and tennis courts, and we are arranging to hold a golf tournament and a tennis meet for which suitable prizes will be awarded. A committee is now working out the details of the plans, and we might add that enthusiasm runs high at the meetings of the Providence members of the class. Replies from the first circular letter have been coming in, and indications are that this Reunion will be the largest the class has ever held. Jack Haley is preparing a booklet giving the class history since graduation, with illustrations particularly of the children of the members. If you haven't sent in your information for this history, do it now! Write it out in full and mail it to John W. Haley, Haley & Sykes, 26 Custom House st., Providence.

Wilbert B. Skerrye is a member of the Faculty of the Central High School, Manchester, N. H.

Glenn Burt, member of the class in our Freshman year, is the owner of the firm of Glenn B. Burt and Associates, advertising, with offices at 428 Statler bldg., Boston. Glenn and his family (Mrs. Burt and Glenn B. Burt, Jr., (going on seven) live at 55 Sawyer ave., Dorchester, Mass.

Harold R. Moulton and Mrs. Moulton (Ruth Lester, Pembroke '19) have our full sympathy in the loss of their daughter, Nancy Chace, who died at the Worcester Memorial Hospital March 23, last.

George Brace is on the advertising staff of the Furniture Publishing Corporation, publisher of trade papers, Jamestown, N. Y. John W. Brace, if all goes well, will probably appear at Brown with the class of '48 or '49.

1920

Perry Williams, who entered with the class and left in March, 1917, to enlist in the United States Navy, is president of the Willeray Confectionery Co., Jackson, Mich.

Lou Pieri is officiating as president of the Pawtucket and District Manufacturers' Baseball League this season.

We never had any idea that Albert Lownes was an orchid enthusiast until we read in the Providence Journal that he had given a lecture before the Handicraft Club of Providence on "Hunting Orchids Through New England." Fact is, we thought orchids grew only in hot-houses. But we learned that Al has found many varieties of wild ones and has pictures of them to prove it.

Bill Nairn and Mrs. Nairn have changed their address to Apartment 107B, The Admiral, 48th and Locust st., West Philadelphia, Pa. "Next to the new college which will open in September," says Bill. The college he refers to is the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, where he is instructor in biology and also is studying for a degree.

A personal note not long ago from Harold E. Deady had this final paragraph: "It would be better, perhaps, to send my mail in care of the Diamond Match Co., Oswego, N. Y." The note was the first we've had from Harry in an age, and it was really welcome, thank you.

C. B. Howard of the advertising department of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company has been conducting the advertising course backed by the Hartford Advertising Club at the Public Evening High School in that city. The Hartford Courant gave "C. B." a good boost in its account of his qualifications as an instructor in advertising.

Arthur K. Litchfield has shaken the dust of Bridgeport, Conn., from his shoes and is with the Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Ind. "A long way from home," he says, but it looks to us as if he were near enough to Notre Dame to see a good football game occasionally.

1923

Johnny Trainor has the sympathy of the class in the loss of his mother, who died suddenly while worshipping in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Fall River, Mass., March 31, last.

Lincoln Howe, formerly with the Providence Journal, is on the copy desk of the Boston Traveler. Linc and Walter Daniels '22 are keeping bachelors' quarters in Boston.

Diz Faulkner, last seen and accounted for by your correspondent at the Brown-New Hampshire football game in Providence last fall, is with the John Warren Watson Stabilator Co., selling the company product in Far West territory.

Ernie Lynn's new address (personal) is 1308, North, 28th st., Birmingham, Ala. Ernie is with the explosives department of the DuPont Company, with his headquarters in Watson, Ala.

Steve McClellan, former test pilot and a member of the Caterpillar Club, now sales manager for the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Company of Hartford, Conn., reverted last month to his old role to test the new Vought Corsairs being produced by the Chance Vought Company of Long Island City, N. Y., on a rush

The Old Back Campus at Brown

By Walter Lee Munro '79

This quaint tale of a stirring period in the history of Brown is now available in bound form. A colorful review of the pranks, adventures and activities "on the Hill" when Seniors wore sideburns and "Bingo" was the favorite college song.

Every Brown man should own a copy of this historically-correct narrative.

Bill Sargent is manager of the L. G. Balfour Retail Stores, which own and operate chain jewelry shops, and has his headquarters in the First National Bank bldg., Attleboro, Mass. Bill Sargent, Jr. (nearly five months old) is already indicating that he will come to Brown in due season.

Bill Dyer is in charge of the national advertising for the Syracuse Post-Standard and doing mighty well, we have been told. Bill is planning to come back for the Fifth Reunion, and maybe he will have a ballad or two of his own composing to recite for us.

Bob Lloyd is an industrial engineer with the Gorham Mfg. Co., Providence, and lives at 28 Glen Road, Woonsocket, R. I.

Elmer Anderson is on the staff of the general installation engineer of the Western Electric Co., with his headquarters at 149 Fulton st., New York. Elmer reports that he was married July 16, 1928, to Frances E. Rixey, and that he and Mrs. Anderson are at home at 328 Central ave., Leonia, N. J.

Fritz Harvey is with The Lane Company, Detroit, not Gately's, as we reported last month. Fritz is general merchandise manager for the concern, which handles men and women's apparel. He and Mrs. Harvey (Dorothea Sprague '25, Pembroke) are living at the Alden Park Manor in Detroit.

Louis Goff is with Elsbree-Valleau Co., Providence, and he and Mrs. Goff and Louis, Jr., are living at 286 Benefit st.

Courtney Morgan, after working for the past five years for the Munson Steamship Line, New York, is back in Providence, taking business courses at Bryant-Stratton College.

Anybody seen or heard of Malcolm Berrian lately? Mail sent to him at Greenwich, Conn., has been returned to the Alumni Office.

Heber Wharton, with his M. D. from Howard University, has been serving this year as interne at the Freedmen's Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Jim Sims reports that he is assistant to the foreman, Acme Finishing Company, Pawtucket, R. I. The two youngsters in the Sims family are Mary Louise and William Mayberry (Brown '49 or '50).

Davy Jones has left the printing business high and dry to go with National Brake Service, Inc., 105 West Adamsst., Chicago. "It's Furb Marshall's company," Davy wrote us recently. Furb Marshall, a '19 man, was assistant coach of the football team a few years ago.

E. B. (Mac) McAlevy is office manager for the Chas. E. Fogg Co., bedding manufacturers, with his office at 8 Atlantic ave., Boston. "Mac" has been married nearly two years now, and he and Mrs. McAlevy are living at 385 Pond ave., Brookline, Mass.

Jack Monk has joined the production staff of the Twentieth Century Press, originators of national financial printing, 40 So. Clinton st., Chicago. Jack confides he has "a knockout of a private office," and we dread meeting the proud and haughty office boy who, we'll bet, guards the door to it.

Johnny Wachter is in the trust department of the Equitable Trust Co., 11 Broad st., New York, but he still hangs his hat in Brooklyn—130 Montague st., if you must know precisely.

Ralph Stoddard is with the National Surety Co., 4 Albany st., New York, and is living at 8086 88th ave., Woodhaven, L. I. Ralph has been with this company since he went away from College Hill in 1925.

Phil Williams, after working for Jordan, Marsh Co. in Boston for three years, is now buyer in the upholstery department of the John C. MacInnes Co., Worcester. We're not sure that we have reported the arrival of Peter Reed Williams on Feb. 28, 1928, so here's the announcement.

C. L. (Kewpie) Ramsdell, Jr., is working for the United Electric Railways in Providence as inspector in the Track Department. Kewpie commutes daily from North Scituate, R. I.

bound for Honolulu and, after looking his destination over, decided that he would stay there awhile.

Bill Ripley is teaching the sciences at the Cohasset, Mass., High School. Bill and Len Thompson, who is studying medicine, were Alumni Office visitors about Easter time, and both admitted that they liked what they were doing.

Phil Bronstein's new address is Fenmore Apartments, 64 Charlesgate East, Boston.

Bruce Loomis has left Philadelphia to return to New York as national sales manager for the laboratory, hospital and museum division of the Van Dorn Iron Works Co., 41 East 42nd st. The shift means a promotion for Bruce, and we congratulate him.

C. Malcolm Tirrell, member of the class in our Freshman year, is resident surgeon of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, Canada. He received his M. D. from Washington University, St. Louis, and went to the Royal Victoria Hospital last July. We congratulate him on his engagement, which is reported in another column. His bride-to-be expects to receive her M. A. at Columbia in June, and the marriage will take place in the summer.

John Hunt is back under the family roof tree at 11415 91st ave., Richmond Hill, N. Y., and is working for the Western Electric Co., in New York. Last time we heard from John was when he was in Ludlow, Mass.

Don Riggs was fatally wounded while cleaning a revolver in his room in Caswell Hall at the University April 4. He had just received a Henry D. Sharpe Fellowship for 1929-30 and was planning to go to Italy next summer. He had been at Brown for the present academic year studying romance languages. Don was born Donald Morey Riggs in Waterbury, Conn., Nov. 17, 1903, the son of Harvey Brooks and Amelia (Webb) Riggs. He came to college from Crosby High School, Waterbury, and as an undergraduate was a member of the Classical Society and the Brown Battery. Firearms were a hobby with him. After receiving his degree he went to the University of Nebraska as an instructor in Spanish, and in 1927-28 he was on the Faculty of Chestnut Hill Academy, Chestnut Hill, Pa. He is survived by his parents and a brother, Harvey B. Riggs, Jr., '32, with whom he was living at the time of his death. To his father and mother and brother the sympathy of the class is extended.

Monty Mason and Carl (Shorty) Reed, both strictly on the job with the General Electric Company in Schenectady, N. Y., asked to be remembered to all of the gang when we saw them at the Brown dinner in Albany last month. Shorty is married, we understand, and Monty is thinking about it seriously.

George Hume and Gerry Higgins are in Boston with the Shoe Retailer, 166 Essex st. George is selling and Gerry is doing editorial work.

Ted Putney is still going strong with the Poor Publishing Company, Wellesley, Mass. One of our scouts reports that Ted "recently took delivery on a shiny new Ford which the college girls are enjoying very much."

Pret MacDonald admits he has the baseball virus as violent as usual at this season of the year. "How I would like to be out there with Wally Snell and the old gang for another season!" he said in a letter a couple of weeks ago. "But I guess the Braintree Twilight League will have to satisfy me again this year."

Warren Noble is assistant supervisor of costs for the Atlas Plywood Corporation at 934 Park Square bldg., Boston. Warren tells us that he was married Dec. 29, 1928, to Miss Virginia Peabody Fitts and that he and Mrs. Noble are now at home at Shelton road, Post Island, Quincy, Mass.

J. W. Merriam appears to be moving right along with the New York Telephone Co. He's down on the books as a traffic superintendent, with his offices at 370 East 150th st., New York.

1928

Jack Drysdale has come back to Providence to become director of boys' work at Grace Church.

Pembroke College Ungraduate Activities

The Alumnae Association gave a tea in honor of the Senior class on Wednesday, March 20, in the Crystal Room. Mrs. John Murdock, president of the Association, poured, assisted by various other members of the Association.

On the 15th of March the Freshmen gave their All-College party. As entertainment they went into the vaudeville circuit and presented Scotch dances, vocal numbers and a short skit. Following that, there was general dancing in the Crystal Room and refreshments in the St. Patrick's manner.

The Pembroke Varsity swimming team was defeated by New York University on March 15, by the score of 44.5 to 35.5. The meet occurred at the Plantations Club and Helen Smith of Pembroke was high scorer, securing two firsts and a second.

On the 19th of March the Student Government Association gave a tea in the Crystal Room for the Romance and Classical Departments. These teas have been taking place throughout the season in the hope that they will promote a better understanding between the professors and students.

The Lenten recital arranged by Gene Ware with the assistance of the Glee Club and Marguerite Watson Shaftoe as soloist took place on March 26.

The Press Club tea was held on April 9 for all those interested in doing Press Club work. Ethel Humphrey, president of the Press Club, spoke on its organization, and Mildred Anderson, director of the club, spoke on "Writing for Newspapers."

On Thursday evening, April 11, the Vocational Guidance Committee gave a supper for the English Department. Fifteen members of the department came and made it quite worth while for those students interested in English. Following the supper, Professor Brown spoke on "Journalism," Dr. Mabbott on

"Research" and Mr. Macdougall on "Criticism and Review."

Prom plans! Before the Big Event dinner, dances are to be held in Miller and Metcalf Halls and at the Wannamoisett Country Club for the city girls. Prom itself will be held in Alumnae Hall from 9 until 2, with the "Tunesters" from Oak Manor, Melrose, Mass., supplying the music. Favors, always a big secret, will this year be given to men and women.

On Saturday, April 13, Komians presented "The Discovery," by the mother of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, at both matinee and evening performances. Mrs. Seals very ably directed the play and was largely instrumental in securing the costumes used by the Columbia Laboratory players in the original presentation. The cast:

Lord Medway, Sue Deacon; Colonel Medway, Mary Coy; Sir Anthony Branville, Josephine Gable; Sir Harry Flutter, Katharine McSoley; Footman, Mary Ferdon; Creditor, Grace King; Lady Medway, Elizabeth Considine; Louisa Medway, Elizabeth Gunning; Lady Flutter, Helen Moffitt; Mrs. Knightly, Mildred Starkweather; Miss Richly, Dorothy Hess; Betty, maid to Lady M., Frances Miller; Susan, maid to Mrs. K., Myrtle Ryder.

Speaking of plays, the Spanish Club is presenting three plays: "Los Pantalones," "Manana del Sol" and "Lotteraus" in Marston Hall on May 3.

WILL THE COLLEGE GATES
BE CLOSED
TO YOUR CHILD BECAUSE YOU HAVE NOT MADE THE NECESSARY PREPARATIONS
WELL IN ADVANCE

It has a harsh sound to even suggest that the college gate may be closed to your child, for the gateways to learning are always open.

Many thousands of boys and girls, however, have found that although the college gates are open, they could not enter them.

These youths may have been prepared, but their parents were not. These young students were looking forward to higher fields of learning, but their parents had failed to make provision sufficiently in advance.

Of course not every boy and girl is going to college and not every parent can afford to send his children to college.

If you are one who plans to give your child the advantages of a college education, the question is simply this.

When your child is ready for College, will you be ready, too?

Our Child's Educational Fund affords you the simplest, the most complete, and the most positive means of providing the necessary funds for your child's education.
